Bright Shapes And The True Names:

The Bright Shapes and the True Names Patrick McCaughey, 2003-01-01 Patrick McCaughey remains one of Australian art's most remarkable and charismatic figures. The Bright Shapes and the True Names is the story of his brilliant career, his emigration to Australia at the age of ten, his discovery of art in his late teens, his days as the dynamic and outspoken art critic for the Age and his glittering directorship of the National Gallery of Victoria. Together with memories of Fred Williams and other artists, the frenzied activity of the Whitlam government's Visual Arts Board and an extraordinary account of the notorious theft of Picasso's Weeping Woman from the NGV, McCaughey offers a fascinating and enthusiastic insider's view of the Australian art world and its development over three decades. A Quest for Enlightenment Christopher Heathcote, 2007 The most publicly accessible art of the late Roger Kemp is perhaps the magnificent tapestries that hang in the great hall of the National Gallery of Victoria. This major figure of Australia's post-war art world is the subject of Christopher Heathcote's latest book. When Modern Became Contemporary Art Charles Green, Heather Barker, 2024-09-19 This book is a portrait of the period when modern art became contemporary art. It explores how and why writers and artists in Australia argued over the idea of a distinctively Australian modern and then postmodern art from 1962, the date of publication of a foundational book, Australian Painting 1788-1960, up to 1988, the year of the Australian Bicentennial. Across nine chapters about art exhibitions, curators and critics, this book describes the shift from modern art to contemporary art through the successive attempts to define a place in the world for Australian art. But by 1988, Australian art looked less and less like a viable tradition inside which to interpret our art. Instead, vast gaps appeared since mostly male and often older White writers had limited their horizons to White Australia alone. National stories by White men like borders had less and less explanatory value. Underneath this, a perplexing subject remained: the absence of Aboriginal art in understanding what Australian art was during the period that established the idea of a distinctive Australian modern and then contemporary art. This book reflects on why the embrace of Aboriginal art was so late in art museums and histories of Australian art, arguing that this was because it was not part of a national story dominated by colonial then neo-colonial dependency. It is important reading for all scholars of both global and Australian art and for curators and artists. A Steady Storm of Correspondence Gwen Harwood, 2001 Gwen Harwood has long been recognised as one of Australia's finest poets and librettists. She had a quicksilver intellect and a rare ability to go directly to the heart of whatever occupied her. Generosity of spirit, biting wit and a superb command of a language characterise both her poetry and her letters to friends. The letters in this edition, written between 1943 and her death in 1995, present a strong claim that Gwen Harwood be considered this country's greatest letter writer. The selection includes less than one tenth of the letters transcribed by her biographer Gregory Kratzmann. Half of the letters here were written to her good friend Tony Riddell, to whom she dedicated all but the last of her volumes of poetry. Her correspondents include major figures from the fields of literature, art and music in Australia, and her love of letter writing
