

Building Britain's future An industrial strategy for construction

The CBI's submission to the construction industrial strategy

CBI on industrial strategy

Establishing a shared vision for construction in 2025

An industrial strategy for construction developed by the sector and government has the potential to unleash growth in the industry and drive transformation. It will help secure the business environment that enables construction to thrive by creating long-term operational certainty.

The CBI's 2014 report Playing our strengths hand – Maximising the UK's industrial opportunities set out the case for developing industrial strategies in key growth sectors to rebalance the economy towards investment and trade. The construction sector is a key economic enabler creating and maintaining our built environment. The sector has strong potential for growth because of its job-creation capacity, extensive value chain and talent capabilities as a result of the recession.

As part of a suite of industrial strategies, the government will launch the construction industrial strategy in summer 2015. This should be the start of an evolving process of industry and government working in partnership to deliver the strategy. This paper sets out the CBI's views on an industrial strategy for construction and is based on extensive discussions with the construction sector and the wider business community.

In the future the construction sector will be an enabler of other industries, providing services that exceed expectations by bringing world-leading expertise. A strong domestic manufacturing sector will be at the heart of an innovative and competitive sector.

A shared vision for the future of the sector will need to be at the centre of a successful industrial strategy for construction. A strategy that delivers built-legended value will ensure:

- The construction sector is at the heart of the UK's economic growth
- Construction is an economic engine that meets and creates demand from key sectors
- By harnessing sources of competitive advantage, construction will be a world-leading industry by 2025.
