10 Geographic Ideas That Changed The World:

Ten Geographic Ideas that Changed the World, 1997 Ten Geographic Ideas that Changed the World Susan Hanson, 1997 In these thought provoking witty essays some of America's most distinguished geographers explore ten geographic ideas that have literally changed the world and the way we think and act They tackle ideas that impose shape on the world ideas that mold our understanding of the natural environment and ideas that establish relationships between people and places The contributors who include several past presidents of the Association of American Geographers members of the National Academy of Sciences and authors of major works in the discipline are Elizabeth K Burns Patricia Gober Anne Godlewska Michael F Goodchild Susan Hanson Robert W Kates John R Mather William B Meyer Mark Monmonier Edward Relph Edward J Taaffe and B L Turner II Handbook for Teaching and Learning in Geography Helen Walkington, Jennifer Hill, Sarah Dyer, 2019-12-27 This exemplary Handbook provides readers with a novel synthesis of international research evidence based practice and personal reflections to offer an overview of the current state of knowledge in the field of teaching geography in higher education Chapters cover the three key transitions into through and out of higher education to present a thorough analysis of the topic Climate Change, Population Health and Island States Janaka Jayawickrama, Arnab Chakraborty, Yong-an Zhang, 2025-08-21 This unique collection examines climate change disasters and human health in both developed and developing island nations highlighting the sociocultural issues in three countries the UK Sri Lanka and Saint Vincent and the Grenadines Examining how domestic and international policies often disregard the contributions which can be made by poor and marginalised communities the book demonstrates how traditional ecological knowledge systems which once enabled effective adaptation to environmental variability have been systematically marginalised through processes of modernisation and globalisation Furthermore the book argues that the colonial model of prevention and responses should be reconsidered advocating instead for a more inclusive collaborative approach to climate health governance one that meaningfully incorporates local perspectives while addressing structural vulnerabilities to develop equitable context specific solutions for island states facing the escalating challenges of climate change and disaster related health risks This critical analysis will be of interest to students scholars and policymakers in public health climate change and sustainability disaster risk reduction history anthropology sociology and human geography The Open Access version of this book available at <http://www.taylorfrancis.com> has been made available under a Creative Commons Attribution Non Commercial No Derivatives CC BY NC ND 4.0 license The Geography of Contemporary China Jing'ai Wang, Shunlin Liang, Peijun Shi, 2022-06-28 This textbook provides a comprehensive and very detailed insight into Chinese Contemporary Geography in English It documents the geographical issues associated with China's rapid growth Since initiating the reforms and open policy China has achieved tremendous success China's rapid growth is now a driving force in the global economy and is achieving unprecedented rates of poverty reduction However China also faces a number of sustainability and emerging challenges associated with rapid growth such as growing regional disparities in terms of per capita income and social economic development sustainable resource development and issues related to regional and global economic integration In addition rapid economic growth has also brought about major challenges such as resource shortages ecological and environmental destruction land degradation and frequent disasters This book presents the authors reflections This lavishly illustrated book covers physical geography history and economic and political systems of the world s most populous country The major focus is on geographical issues in China s contemporary development agriculture population urbanization resource and energy and environment The lead author of the book has taught relevant courses in China for three decades and authored and edited multiple textbooks for Chinese students This book will appeal to undergraduate students of geography and related disciplines with a regional focus on China and to the general reader who wants to learn different geographical aspects of modern China with little academic background in geography

The Texas-Mexico Water Dispute and Its Resolution (?) Cyrus Reed, 2007

Between 1992 and 2005 Chihuahua s Rio Conchos outflows were at less than 10 percent of their historical average prompting a highly public dispute with the U S over water quantity under terms of the 1944 U S Mexico Water Treaty Still Mexico made a number of water payments and achieved an eventual resolution of the dispute The resolution focused on a number of steps including investing over 140 million in irrigation district water conservation projects in the Rio Conchos which has historically provided two thirds of the Rio Grande s water below Fort Quitman Utilizing a case study approach rooted in political and cultural ecology the research examines the factors from drought to land use change purported by different interest groups as contributing to the transboundary Texas Mexico water dispute and finds at least three major narratives emerged in the period to explain the low flows including drought dam management and agricultural expansion and land use changes The dissertation shows however that the reduced outflows and reductions in dam water to farmers was just one factor in a changing agricultural context in which new land tenure rules decentralization of water management and the enactment of a more open economic framework precipitated resource use changes within the agricultural areas In addition the dissertation examines water and land resource use including conservation projects in three specific agricultural areas and finds significant transformations in markets policies and climate Farmers were not just passive victims of reduced water use the curtailment of government programs and privatization of land and water resources but adopted alternative water source strategies began to examine more conservationist minded agricultural practices and shifted cultivation to higher yield crops Still many farmers chose to abandon agriculture altogether as there was some consolidation of resources among wealthier farmers The transnationalization of the Rio Conchos which has resulted from the new focus on its water users may influence local decision making but the research contends that resource management decisions in the Rio Conchos Watershed are influenced and determined by local practices and environments as well as by economic and legal changes brought about by Mexico's inclusion into a globalized economy

Measuring Vulnerability to Natural Hazards Jörn Birkmann, UNU-EHS Expert Working Group on Measuring Vulnerability, 2013 Climate change adaptation building resilience and vulnerability and risk reduction are noble words but do we really know what is meant by these terms and how to assess their respective progress This book seeks to address these questions The world has recently experienced disasters of a magnitude rarely seen before the cascading disaster in Japan the earthquake in Haiti and floods in Pakistan and Australia are a few prominent examples These major disasters underline the fact that many communities and world regions are still vulnerable to extreme events and natural hazards Additionally creeping changes such as sea level rise are emerging pressures in the context of climate change These changes are very likely to seriously affect livelihoods in many regions The dynamic and complex interaction between vulnerable communities and climate and non climate related sudden onset and creeping hazards will most likely increase the risk of crises and disasters in the future Following the popularity of the first edition this volume has been completely revised and fully updated This new edition includes the dimension of adaptation to climate change and new risks resulting from climate change It combines practical examples from Africa Asia the Americas and Europe with theoretical and conceptual frameworks It is key reading for all those interested in improving risk reduction and adaptation strategies to extreme events and gradual changes in the context of climate change and natural hazards
