Literacy and the Nation's Libraries Helen H. Lyman, 1977 Testing Ronna F. Dillon, James Pellegrino, 1989-04-04 Research aimed at developing new approaches to testing of complex intellectual processes occupies the forefront of psychology and education. Testing examines the ongoing research efforts into information processing techniques and measures by the military and academic research and development communities. Psychometricians, educational and cognitive psychologists, and personnel researchers will find this review of current testing literature a valuable and practical research tool. Leading experts and professionals from a variety of backgrounds focus on improvements in measuring broadly defined tests of aptitude and on innovations in measuring intellectual skill. Four main topics treated are advances in testing, new methods of testing, new aptitude measures, dimensions of job performance.

Annual Reports of the Board of Education and Superintendent of Public Instruction New Hampshire. State Board of Education, 1970 Behavior & Society, 1984 Vista, 1989-09 Changing Assessments Bernard R. Gifford, Mary Catherine O'Connor, 1992 Bernard R. Gifford. As we edge toward the year 2000, the information age is a reality; the global marketplace is increasingly competitive, and the U.S. labor force is shrinking. Today more than ever, our nation's economic and social well-being hinges on our ability to tap our human resources to identify talent, to nurture it, and to assess abilities and disabilities in ways that help every individual reach his or her full potential. In pursuing that goal, decision makers in education, industry, and government are relying increasingly on standardized tests: sets of questions with identical directions, time limits, and tasks for all test takers designed to permit an inference about what someone knows or can do in a particular area. CALIBRATING DIFFERENCE: Our emphasis on standardized testing rests on a premise that is so basic it often escapes notice: that we humans are different from each other in ways that are both meaningful and measurable. We differ in terms of cognitive ability, aptitude for performing different kinds of mental and physical tasks, temperament, and interests. But somehow, without sufficient examination, we have taken a great collective leap from that commonplace to the notion that there are precise, measurable gradations of innate ability that can be used to direct children to the right classrooms and adults to the right job slots.
