An Atlas of Mammalian Chromosomes Tao C. Hsu, Kurt Benirschke, 2012-12-06 In recent years because of advances in karyological techniques we have witnessed a remarkable renewal of interest in studies of mammalian chromosomes. These techniques generally involving the use of tissue culture colchicine and hypotonic solution pretreatments allow for a much clearer display of metaphase chromosomes of mammalian cells than the classic direct squash or tissue section methods. Consequently what was known about the chromosome complement of most mammals must be revised. The most astonishing revision of course was that made by Tjio and Levan in 1956 who demonstrated that the diploid number of man is 46 not 48 as previously believed. Similar revisions will have to be made for many other mammalian species either in number or in karyotype structure. Many animals are being examined cytologically for the first time. The findings are now extensive and scattered they appear in numerous periodicals and newsletters or they are kept in cytologists file drawers without being published. It is difficult to have access to pertinent data for comparison among related species or for evaluation of various karyological characteristics within a karyotype. Such evaluations can be done only when reasonably uniform material is collected and placed side by side for comparison accompanied by relative references. We considered that probably an Atlas of Mammalian Chromosomes would fulfill such a need. Needless to say it is impossible to present karyotypes of all mammalian species at one time.

Hsu, Kurt Benirschke, 2013-11-11 Since the inception of the Atlas of Mammalian Chromosomes it is a surprise to us that we have finished five volumes with karyotypes of nearly 250 mammalian species. We acknowledge the fact that there are many imperfections in this series but we also hope that these volumes have been useful to various investigators. Springer Verlag has made a binder which will accommodate the material of all five volumes. We also revised our index to facilitate easy reference. If the material is arranged in the binder according to the Cumulative Contents we believe one will find it convenient to consult with this book. Volume 5 as in the previous volumes contains a Cumulative Index Cumulative Table of Contents as well as an individual Index and Table of Contents for Volume 5. Previous Indices and Tables of Contents should be discarded. October 1970 T C Hsu Kurt Benirschke v Instructions. A special vinyl binder is available from the publisher which will accommodate the material of the first five volumes. Twenty dividers have been provided with printed tabs. These dividers are intended to separate the Orders and the Index. It is suggested that the dividers be placed in the following sequence of Orders which sequence will be followed in the future when presenting karyo An Atlas of Mammalian
