Academic Paper from the year 2014 in the subject Business economics Investment and Finance grade 1 7 Technical University of Munich language English abstract The focus of this paper lies on answering the questions what factors should be considered to successfully exit a venture with regard to exit timing and routing and how these strategic choices are interrelated The divestment process plays a critical role in the Venture Capital VC business model Typically a VC invested venture is not able to pay dividends prior to its exit as the business has not fully matured yet Therefore a Venture Capital Firm VCF generates virtually all of its income by realizing capital gains at the time of the venture's exit This indicates that a VCF heavily depends on a successful divestment transaction in most cases a poor exit execution leads to an inferior return on investment which in turn can ruin the VCF's overall performance A VCF therefore plans its exits carefully and evaluates its strategic choices In this context the two most important exit decision variables considered by a VCF are the choice of exit route and the choice of exit timing By choosing the right exit route and pursuing good exit timing a VCF can significantly increase its proceeds for a given venture The primary focus of this paper lies on answering these aforementioned questions by drawing together the empirical research on these two dominant strategic exit choices The Powys Review, 1990
