The Nature of Scientific Innovation, Volume I David Dent, 2024-12-01 Innovation is a major driver of social economic and environmental change and is researched extensively by academics from disciplines as diverse as business engineering economics sociology and psychology On the whole each discipline pursues its own pathway to understanding without an interdisciplinary framework that links diverse research outputs This partite structure creates a remove from the practical realities of entrepreneurship and the innovators who operate and perceive innovation in its entirety This book delivers insights and creates a different framework one that includes terminologies and typologies greater understanding of paradigmatic influences in science needs vs wants and demand impact and value of knowledge publications and patents and economic benefits It challenges current approaches to education research creativity and skills development infrastructure investment and policy This book addresses changes needed to better deliver innovation at a time when the world is desperate for solutions to global problems It will be of interest to scholars and students of innovation from multiple disciplines as well as practitioners policymakers and all those with an interest in scientific innovation The first volume focuses on the processes the means and the impact of scientific innovation It highlights the way scientific research came to the fore as an instrument of government policy for economic growth the way research is undertaken the structures and processes involved the values biases and limitations associated with them and why these matter for innovation Questions are asked about who innovation is for and whether value is being captured in ways that really matter whether the systems are fit for purpose and how meaningful impact could be delivered to meet societal economic and environmental needs and priorities

Understanding

Development Economics Adam Fforde, 2014-01-03 Important parts of development practice especially in key institutions such as the World Bank are dominated by economists In contrast Development Studies is largely based upon multidisciplinary work in which anthropologists human geographers sociologists and others play important roles Hence a tension has arisen between the claims made by Development Economics to be a scientific measurable discipline prone to wide usage of mathematical modelling and the more discursive practice based approach favoured by Development Studies The aim of this book is to show how the two disciplines have interacted as well as how they differ This is crucial in forming an understanding of development work and to thinking about why policy recommendations can often lead to severe and continuing problems in developing countries This book introduces Development Economics to those coming from two different but linked perspectives economists and students of development who are not economists In both explaining and critiquing Development Economics the book is able to suggest the implications of these findings for Development Studies and more broadly for development policy and its outcomes
