Abstract

Geospatial sensing and data-driven technologies (GSDDTs) are playing an increasingly important role in transforming (agro)forestry practices across the Western Balkans 6 region (WB6). This review critically examines the current state of GSDDT application in six WB countries (also known as the WB6 group)—Albania, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Kosovo*, Montenegro, North Macedonia, and Serbia—with a focus on their contributions to sustainable (agro)forest management. The analysis explores the use of unmanned aerial vehicles (UAVs), light detection and ranging (LiDAR), geographic information systems (GIS), and satellite imagery in (agro)forest monitoring, biodiversity assessment, landscape restoration, and the promotion of circular economy models. Drawing on 25 identified case studies across WB6—for example, ALFIS, Forest Beyond Borders, ForestConnect, Kuklica Geosite Survey, CREDIT Vibes, and Project O₂ (including drone-assisted reforestation in Kosovo*)—this review highlights both technological advancements and systemic limitations. Key barriers to effective GSDDT deployment across WB6 in the (agro)forestry sector and its cross-border cooperation initiatives include fragmented legal frameworks, limited technical expertise, weak institutional coordination, and reliance on short-term donor funding. In addition to mapping current practices, this paper offers a comparative overview of UAV regulations across the WB6 region and identifies six major challenges influencing the adoption and scaling of GSDDTs. To address these, it proposes targeted policy interventions, such as establishing national LiDAR inventories, harmonizing UAV legislation, developing national GSDDT strategies, and creating dedicated GSDDT units within forestry agencies. This review also underscores how GSDDTs contribute to compliance with seven European Union (EU) acquis chapters, how they support eight Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and their sixteen targets, and how they advance several EU Green Agenda objectives. Strengthening institutional capacities, promoting legal alignment, and enabling cross-border data interoperability are essential for integrating GSDDTs into national (agro)forest policies and research agendas. This review underscores GSDDTs' untapped potential in forest genetic monitoring and landscape restoration, advocating for their institutional integration as catalysts for evidence-based policy and ecological resilience in WB6 (agro)forestry systems.

many dimensions of this exclusion This issue has been the focus of much debate within the social sciences yet has largely been underresearched in the Information Systems field despite our concerns with the social and organizational aspects of technology To the extent that contemporary debates have identified access to information as a key component of poverty digital exclusion is seen as the problem Thus ICTs are portrayed as either exacerbating exclusion or are presented as the solution for greater inclusion This conference will provide us with the opportunity to build upon our strong tradition of studying technology design and use in organizations and expand our field of enquiry to consider the processes that engender social exclusion and the issues that derive from it This theme invites consideration of social and organizational constraints that result in the underrepresentation of certain groups and by implication certain issues Likewise it invites consideration of emerging technologies that have the potential to alter social political and economic relations Much is being written about the ubiquitous nature of ICTs to change society for example open source software has recently emerged as a concept with implications far beyond the technology domain This suggests that the role of ICTs in addressing social exclusion is far more complex than often thought For this reason it is timely to expand our focus and progress the study of IS beyond the organizational level of analysis so that we may consider wider concerns affecting all citizens This book contains the proceedings of the Working Conference on the societal and organizational implications for information systems of social inclusion This conference sponsored by the International Federation for Information Processing Working Group 8.2 was held in Limerick Ireland July 12-15 2006
