

Study Unit 1 – Introduction to Psychopathology

- Psychopathology: is the scientific study of psychological disorders
- The central theme of psychopathology is why people develop psychological disorders
- Psychological disorder: Psychological dysfunction, associated with distress and impairment / deviating functioning
- The study of psychopathology within psychology necessitates investigating all the factors that contribute to the clinical picture and to the development and maintenance of disorders

Aetiology

- Aetiology- the study of the causes of disorders
- Understand the factors that contribute to the development of the disorder
- Informs decisions about treatment
- Informs preventative measures
- Helps with classification and categorisation of disorders
- Stimulates further research

Why aetiology cannot provide us with direct answers about the causes of disorders:

- Human behaviour is complex
- Disorders are caused by multiple factors.
- Causal factors change over the lifespan
- Different causal routes exist for the same disorder = equifinality (e.g. eating disorders)
- Same causal route may develop into different disorders= multifinality(e.g. parenting styles)

Equifinality and multifinality

- Equifinality= when sets of differing circumstances lead to the same disorder
- Multifinality= when sets of similar circumstances lead to different disorders

Biopsychosocial model

- It is a framework that posits that biological, psychological and social factors play a significant role in the development, management and maintenance of health and illness
- It is an interconnected way of understanding how suffering, disease and illnesses are affected by multiple levels of organisations
- It allows for the identification and incorporation of non-medical components into a diagnostic framework
