ABSTRACT

Brandão, A. and Martin, W.J., 1993. Implications of agricultural trade liberalization for the developing countries. Agric. Econ., 8: 313–343.

The developing countries as a group could expect to experience only small welfare gains if they chose not to actively participate in agricultural trade liberalization and relied solely on the benefits of partial liberalization in the OECD countries. Participation along the lines of the Dunkel package, with the developing countries reducing positive assistance by less than the developed countries, would yield gains of the order of US $20 billion. More comprehensive participation in trade liberalization involving reductions of both positive and negative protection would almost triple these welfare gains. While some developing countries do not gain from trade liberalization even with full participation, the number of such countries and the magnitude of their losses are greatly reduced.

1. INTRODUCTION

The Uruguay Round has been the most complex of the eight rounds of multilateral negotiations among the contracting parties to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). With tariffs on most manufactured goods already reduced to low levels in developed countries, issues put aside in earlier rounds have been brought to the forefront of the discussions. Agriculture has assumed a key role in the process and the conclusion of the round has been delayed several times primarily because of difficulties in reaching an agreement on agriculture.
