

at the National Library of Medicine for additional papers to have provided legal counsel on copyright and other issues on behalf of the National Center for Health Education; and Robert "Bobby" Schwartz, manager of the Word Processing Center at Teachers College, Columbia University, and his team, including Glenn Levine and Francis Hill, who scanned and digitized text from the original manuscripts; Constant Tsai and I-Ming Lin, who worked to obtain the necessary copyright permissions; and Perry Engel, who scanned the figures and tables from the original manuscripts.

We thank the National Center for Health Education, who also provided support from the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, published the first anthology. We are especially grateful to Anne E. Prewitt, former staff member of the President's Commission on Health Education and former president of the National Center for Health Education, who provided for us one of the remaining copies of the 1987 edition. We also owe a special debt of gratitude to Teachers College, Columbia University, and the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, without whom we just the new volume would not have been possible.

Finally, we would be remiss if we did not thank our supporters, Andrea Alagona and Louise Gilbert, as well as local citizens, who have encouraged and supported us in working on this project when we might otherwise have been working on other projects.
