The Ayers Case Dr. Cliff E. Williams, BS, MEd., Ed.D. CBE, 2005-10-03 This book sets forth events and people involved in the settlement of the Ayers case from the filing of the law suit inclusive of discussions and proposals designed to settle the case through the federal courts Numerous proposals that included merging schools closing schools deleting programs are discussed There was wide spread disagreement with the plaintiff s proposal and the defendant s proposal Major issues and decisions of the courts are discussed Also many pros and cons of the settlement agreement that was crafted out in the year 2001 are cited The plaintiffs did not agree with the settlement Consequently an appeal was made to the Supreme Court in an effort to get what they wanted The final decision of the United States Supreme Court is included Implementing the Ayers Case Settlement: A Multiple Case Study of Three Historically Black Institutions in Mississippi Lemondra V. Hamilton, 2015 The State of Mississippi operated a dual system of higher education for White and Black citizens The inequitable funding of historically Black colleges and universities HBCUs became the central issue in the Ayers lawsuit The State of Mississippi agreed to pay 503 million for endowments and programs at the three public four year HBCUs The purpose of this multiple case study was to understand the impact of the Ayers case on state supported HBCUs in Mississippi from a Critical Race Theory perspective The research questions that guided this study How has the history of higher education in Mississippi affected the way HBCUs operate today How does the Ayers case affect HBCUs today What strategies have HBCUs employed to achieve the student diversity measure set forth by the Ayers settlement as a condition for controlling the endowment Data collection utilized semi structured interviews nonparticipant observation document analysis and field notes Research findings from the cross case analysis suggest that embedded racism and classism caused White state leaders to form a segregated higher education system The interests of Whites and Blacks converged when a large portion of funds were used for other race scholarships and stipends to benefit White students Control of the endowment was withheld from HBCUs until each university obtained a 10% population of other race students for three consecutive years To achieve the diversity measure athletics departments at HBCUs recruited Caucasian and international students administrators signed memoranda of understanding with predominantly White institutions PWIs and international universities and academic programs on branch campuses attracted other race students The implications for HBCU administrators include securing maximum funds from the state using the funding formula generating revenue from outside sources by educating alumni adequately staffing and funding institutional advancement and using the institution s bond rating to build needed facilities when necessary In conclusion the Ayers settlement benefitted HBCUs with capital projects and temporary funds that supported new and enhanced academic programs faculty salaries and operating budgets but White students also benefitted from the settlement in the form of other race scholarships and stipends HBCU administrators are making plans to subsume Ayers budget costs into their operating budgets Ayers Case Decision Neal B.
