Ayala's Angel Trollope, 1881 Ayala's Angel Anthony Trollope, 2016-01-05 THE TWO SISTERS When Egbert Dormer died he left his two daughters utterly penniless upon the world and it must be said of Egbert Dormer that nothing else could have been expected of him The two girls were both pretty but Lucy who was twenty one was supposed to be simple and comparatively unattractive whereas Ayala was credited as her somewhat romantic name might show with poetic charm and a taste for romance Ayala when her father died was nineteen We must begin yet a little earlier and say that there had been and had died many years before the death of Egbert Dormer a clerk in the Admiralty by name Reginald Dosett who and whose wife had been conspicuous for personal beauty Their charms were gone but the records of them had been left in various grandchildren There had been a son born to Mr Dosett who was also a Reginald and a clerk in the Admiralty and who also in his turn had been a handsome man With him in his decadence the reader will become acquainted There were also two daughters whose reputation for perfect feminine beauty had never been contested The elder had married a city man of wealth of wealth when he married her but who had become enormously wealthy by the time of our story He had when he married been simply Mister but was now Sir Thomas Tringle Baronet and was senior partner in the great firm of Travers and Treason Of Traverses and Treasons there were none left in these days and Mr Tringle was supposed to manipulate all the millions with which the great firm in Lombard Street was concerned He had married old Mr Dosett s eldest daughter Emmeline who was now Lady Tringle with a house at the top of Queen s Gate rented at 1 500 a year with a palatial moor in Scotland with a seat in Sussex and as many carriages and horses as would suit an archduchess Lady Tringle had everything in the world a son two daughters and an open handed stout husband who was said to have told her that money was a matter of no consideration himself with his beauty having simply married the estimable daughter of a brother clerk Now at the age of fifty he had his 900 a year from his office and might have lived in fair comfort had he not allowed a small millstone of debt to hang round his neck from his earlier years But still he lived creditably in a small but very genteel house at Notting Hill and would have undergone any want rather than have declared himself to be a poor man to his rich relations the Tringles About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
