Evans,1998-09-10 First study of the Dark Age comitatus or warband drawing evidence from literary and historical sources

The Lords of Battle examines the image of the comitatus or warband as it is portrayed in literary and historical sources from Britain's early medieval period attempting to determine the extent to which it reflects an historical reality. Through an extensive use of a variety of source material literary historical and archaeological the book investigates both the structure of the warband and the practices and institutions which supported it. After a review of the historical background of Dark Age Britain Stephen Evans explores the practical characteristics of the comitatus its military organisation its internal social structure and its place within society as a whole and the lord retainer relationship its duties and obligations. He also examines the cultural social and economic institutions which produced and supported the warband. Overall the study provides a number of insights into the ideals and practices of Britain's Celtic and Anglo Saxon warrior elites during a turbulent period. Dr STEPHEN EVANS gained his PhD from Temple University. Nonhuman voices in Anglo-Saxon literature and material culture James Paz, 2017-07-07. Nonhuman voices in Anglo Saxon literature and material culture uncovers the voice and agency possessed by nonhuman things across Anglo Saxon literature and material culture. It makes a new contribution to thing theory and rethinks conventional divisions between animate human subjects and inanimate nonhuman objects in the early Middle Ages. Anglo Saxon writers and craftsmen describe artefacts and animals through riddling forms or enigmatic language balancing an attempt to speak and listen to things with an understanding that these nonhumans often elude, defy and withdraw from us. But the active role that things have in the early medieval world is also linked to the Germanic origins of the word where a thing is a kind of assembly with the ability to draw together other elements creating assemblages in which human and nonhuman forces combine. English and German Medieval poetry Renoir's purpose is to apply the rapidly increasing amount of original and far reaching research in oral formulaic theory and tradition to the critical interpretation of poetry He concentrates on works of recognized literary merit such as Beowulf and the Hildebrandslied primarily because the book is aimed at English speakers and the examination of major poems drawn from early English and immediately related cultures is more relevant to this audience and because a preponderance of the masterpieces of oral formulaic composition that have survived are in the West Germanic tradition In contrast to many oral formulaic investigations this study is primarily concerned with the literary quality of the materials examined It is addressed to all scholars concerned with Medieval English poetry and its roots scholars concerned with Germanic philology and oral formulaic matters and scholars concerned with literary interpretation in general Further it has considerable potential for use by students and in the classrooms Text, 1985 The Gab as a Latent Genre in Medieval French Literature John L.
