Options Trading for Beginners Jason Lee,2015-09-30 A trader s portfolio can be filled with many different kinds of investment instruments This can include stocks bonds mutual funds etc These are probably some of the more famous vehicles but in this mini course we are going to cover a slightly more sophisticated kind of investment options The first thing you need to understand is that options like all other financial vehicles involves risk and is probably not suitable to everybody In fact options trading is probably one of the riskier investments out there You will understand why in a minute The advantage of trading options really lies in the fact that it gives the trader a lot of freedom to choose how he wants to trade A trader can be extremely speculative or conservative depending on his trading personality The main aim of this series of mini course is to equip you with the fundamental knowledge of what options trading is so that you are able to navigate the market independently and confidently So what are options Options are essentially contracts that gives the owner the right to buy or sell an asset at a fixed price also known as strike price for a defined period of time This is different from stock trading where the investor buy and sell the actual asset itself However an option is still a security The buyer of the contract has the right to purchase the underlying asset but is not obligated to do so On the other hand the seller of the contract is obligated to sell if the buyer so wishes to buy Because of its speculative nature an option is also known as a form of derivative If you are still confused here is an example to demonstrate what we have covered You saw a vintage 1960s

Ford car and negotiates a deal with the seller to reach a sell price of 100 000 However you don't have money to buy it until 1 month later So you buy an option to purchase in one month time for 100 000 The contract itself costs 1000 In one month time the price of the car rockets because it was discovered to be a limited edition vintage car It is now worth 500 000 However because you have bought the option to purchase it at 100 000 you may choose to exercise it and make the purchase Your net profit is 500 000 100 000 1 000 399 000 Of course if you may choose not to exercise this option and forfeit the right to purchase the car To do this simply let the expiration of the contract go by and your contract will be useless However you will lose the 1 000 you paid for the contract This means that you will lose 100% of the initial investment which you have put in This example is really a 30 000 feet view of what is an options contract on the whole As you progress you will discover more complexities Therefore it is important that you understand the absolute basics Take some time to figure out a few different scenarios you can work out with option before you move on to the next chapter If this sounds good let us get started right away
