Making Families Jane Ribbens McCarthy, Rosalind Edwards, Val Gillies, 2017-09-08 This book goes to the heart of academic political and popular debates as well as professional concerns about the nature of contemporary family life and parenting Families are widely discussed in western societies as breaking down or as radically changing with step families in particular seen as evidence of such trends In one of the first British in depth sociological research studies for over two decades this book provide evidence of parents and step parents own understandings and experiences of their parenting in step families It addresses questions such as What does it mean to be a family Do people in step families see themselves as making a different kind of family Is individual happiness in a couple relationship prioritised at the expense of responsibilities towards children Can a step parent ever be regarded as the same as a biological mother or father What do people in step families do to try to make step family life work The book looks at how people create understand and experience their parenting and family lives It reveals how these understandings are rooted in a strong sense of moral responsibility but that what such responsibility constitutes varies according to gender and social class In particular it draws out key theoretical implications for understanding the nature of morality fairness and justice and questions ideas about individualisation and the democratisation of family life This book will be essential reading for those concerned with the study of contemporary family lives including sociologists social policy analysts family therapists professionals and practitioners It is also relevant to those interested in contemporary morality and everyday experiences

Marginalised Mothers Val Gillies, 2006-12-05 Successive moral panics have cast poor or socially excluded mothers associated with social problems as diverse as crime underachievement unemployment and mental illness as bad mothers Their mothering practices are held up as the antithesis of good parenting and are associated with poor outcomes for children Marginalised Mothers provides a detailed and much needed insight into the lived experience of mothers who are frequently the focus of public concern and intervention yet all too often have their voices and experiences overlooked The book explores how they make sense of their lives with their children and families position themselves within a context of inequality and vulnerability and resist subvert and survive material and social marginalisation This controversial text uses qualitative data from a selection of working class mothers to highlight the opportunities and choices they face and to expose the middle class assumptions that ground much contemporary family policy It will be of interest to students and researchers in sociology social work and social policy as well as social workers and policymakers

Pathways of Human Development Jay A. Mancini, Karen A. Roberto, 2009-08-20 Pathways of Human Development uses theoretical perspectives from developmental social and behavioral sciences to examine the many ways that individuals families and communities intersect and interface Focusing on the impact of change on human development including its antecedents processes and consequences the chapters examine a range of topics such as health and adaptation social anxiety disorder protective factors and risk behaviors parent child relationships adolescent sexuality intergenerational relationships family stress and adaptation and community resilience By extending human development theorizing across these pivotal life changing issues this volume offers a comprehensive map of the trajectories of development among individuals families and communities

Fragmenting Fatherhood Richard Collier, Sally Sheldon, 2008-09-05 This book provides the first sustained engagement with the way that fatherhood has been understood constructed and regulated within English law

Conceptualising Women's Working Lives Wendy Patton, 2013-04-20 Theoretical work on the career development of women has travelled a journey from critique to creation Early work responded to and criticised a literature that focused on theorising male roles in a workplace that was conceptualised as providing vertical career paths primarily for middle class males More recently theorists are creating new constructions and frameworks to enable a more holistic understanding of career applicable to both women and men These constructions include broadening the discussion from women's careers to women's working lives This is the fifth book in the Sense Publishers Career Development Series It features the vibrant work of contributors from around the world writing in the field of women's working lives It emphasises the need to explore theoretical connections and understandings in order to facilitate a more holistic and inclusive understanding of women's working lives The writers in the current volume acknowledge the changing roles of women in both public and private spheres Women's roles in paid work are changing both in their nature and type of engagement In addition with an ageing population women's roles in care work are increasingly being extended from child care to aged care This book provides a history of theorising about women's careers in addition to presenting a focus on current empirical and theoretical work which contributes to understandings of women's working lives. Its contributions both map the current discourse and challenge future work to extend the boundaries of that discourse.

Studies in Political Economy, 2004 The Heart of the Matter Selma Sevenhuijsen, Alenka Švab, 2004 Fathers' Rights Activism and Law Reform in Comparative Perspective Sally Sheldon, Richard Collier, 2006-10 This book provides a careful critical and comparative analysis of the work campaigning and legal strategies of fathers rights activists

Choices and Constraints in Family Life Maureen Baker, 2007 Using an interdisciplinary approach that draws on the latest research in sociology anthropology psychology and cultural studies this text expertly traces how families have changed over time and reveals how both personal preferences and social circumstances influence family relationships and society's shared perception of the family. Publisher's description

Research Review, 2004 Research Review University of Ghana. Institute of African Studies, 2004 Families in Society Linda McKie, Sarah Cunningham-Burley, Jo Campling, 2005 Acknowledging the increasing diversity and complexity of families this innovative book proposes a new conceptual framework for understanding families and other relationships that both challenges and attempts to reconcile traditional and contemporary approaches. Using the notion of boundaries the book shifts thinking from families as entities to families as relationship processes. Emphasising the processes that underlie boundary construction and reconstruction suggests that the key to understanding family life is the process of relationship formation. The ideas of entity boundary margins and hybridity provide a framework for understanding the diverse and often contradictory ways in which families contribute to society. Families in Society makes a significant contribution to the academic literature on families and is essential reading for social science students social researchers policy makers and practitioners interested in families and relationships

Children in Crisis Christine Oppong, 2004 Polish Sociological Review, 2004 Democracy in Crisis? A. H. Halsey, Roy Hattersley, 2007 Posits the theory that democracy ethical as well as Marxist is in crisis threatened by the remorseless re penetration of the public sector by market and quasi market principles. Can the tide be turned. This book aims to provide food for thought for those interested in the fundamental problems facing the world in the twenty first century

Environment & Planning, 2005 Staying in Work and Moving Up Lesley Hoggart, 2006 Restructuring Family Policies Maureen Baker, 2006 Recent years have seen significant changes in the social policies of many liberal welfare states this is especially true of social programs for families with children. Increasingly governments are making family policy trade offs reducing support for some families but improving it for others. Why are such trade offs occurring and how do governments differ in their approach to family social policy. This study addresses these questions by examining the political demographic and socio economic factors influencing the restructuring of family related programs in OECD countries. Adopting a feminist political economy approach Maureen Baker shows that while some governments encourage their citizens to see children as future resources and promote strong support for reproductive health programs child welfare services women's refuges subsidized childcare and pay equity others make these claims while simultaneously reducing family incomes through the deregulation of labour markets and restrictions on income support Ultimately Baker demonstrates that nation states with the best outcomes for families offer a variety of social supports which are increasingly important as global markets reduce economic security for some families while improving the financial situation of others This study also explores strategies employed by states to incorporate or resist international pressures and the reasons why some states tenaciously defend their family policy traditions while others restructure according to international guidelines Drawing from nation based research cross national studies and international data bases Restructuring Family Policies successfully integrates mainstream academic debates about restructuring welfare states with feminist research findings and current policy concerns
