Canada's monsters have been pretty quiet recently

WINNIPEG (UPI)—Canada's most celebrated and respected monster movies in 1989 and 1990 are not about aggressive men or bestial and inhuman beasts, they are sci-fi horror.

In America, monster movies enjoyed a resurgence in the 1950s, then faded in the 1960s. But the sci-fi monster movie was resurrected in the 1970s, and the 1980s brought the return of the classic monster. A monster is no longer an animal or a man-beast, but a creature of science fiction.

The new breed of monster movie is not the classic monster of the 1950s, but a creature of science fiction, with the ability to think.

Richard Matheson's "I Am Legend" is a classic example of the sci-fi monster movie. It tells the story of a man who is the last man on earth, and he is hunted by a creature that is a combination of man and beast.

"The Thing" is another classic example of the sci-fi monster movie. It tells the story of a group of men who are trapped in a small town, and they are hunted by a creature that is a combination of man and beast.

"A Quiet Place" is a recent example of the sci-fi monster movie. It tells the story of a family who is trapped in a small town, and they are hunted by a creature that is a combination of man and beast.
