Highland Clearances: The Highland Clearances were a series of evictions of Scottish Highlanders from their ancestral lands in the 18th and 19th centuries. The evictions were carried out by the British government and the British landowners, and were carried out in order to make way for sheep farming and the planting of trees.

Approximately 175,000 Highlanders emigrated to the United States and the Caribbean. Most of the remaining 25% returned to their native lands in order to work as tenant farmers.

Many Highlanders followed their former leaders and fought for the Crown during the American Revolution. Many others, for the sake of the colonies, fought for the British in the American Revolutionary War. Some Highlanders fought for the British in the American Revolutionary War, and some others fought for the British in the American Revolutionary War.
