Almayer spoke jovially and dropped with a contented sigh into the armchair nearest to the table. Nina Almayer came through the curtained doorway followed by an old Malay woman who busied herself in setting upon the table a plateful of rice and fish, a jar of water and a bottle half full of genever. After carefully placing before her master a cracked glass tumbler and a tin spoon, she went away noiselessly. Nina stood by the table, one hand lightly resting on its edge, the other hanging listlessly by her side. Her face turned towards the outer darkness through which her dreamy eyes seemed to see some entrancing picture. She wore a look of impatient expectancy. She was tall for a half caste, with the correct profile of the father, modified and strengthened by the squareness of the lower part of the face inherited from her maternal ancestors, the Sulu pirates. Her firm mouth, with the lips slightly parted and disclosing a gleam of white teeth, put a vague suggestion of ferocity into the impatient expression of her features. And yet her dark and perfect eyes had all the tender softness of expression common to Malay women, but with a gleam of superior intelligence they looked gravely wide open and steady as if facing something invisible to all other eyes. While she stood there, all in white, straight, flexible, graceful, unconscious of herself, her low but broad forehead crowned with a shining mass of long black hair that fell in heavy tresses over her shoulders and made her pale olive complexion look paler still by the contrast of its coal black hue.

Almayer's Folly Annotated Joseph Conrad, 2021-02-12

Almayer's Folly published in 1895 is Joseph Conrad's first novel. Set in the late 19th century, it centers on the life of the Dutch trader Kaspar Almayer in the Borneo jungle and his relationship to his mixed heritage daughter, Nina. By marrying Lingard's adopted Malay daughter, Almayer inherits that prosperous merchant's business and his plans for amassing a huge fortune in gold from rich mines up the Pantai River. Almayer and his wife have one daughter, Nina, a beautiful girl who was sent to Singapore and for ten years was educated as a European. She returns home to Sambir unexpectedly at the end of that time for she cannot bear to be treated as a half caste in a white community. Unsuccessful in business, Almayer nurses dim hopes that he can find a gold mine and his fortune made, take Nina to Amsterdam to spend his last days in prosperous retirement. News that the English are to seize control of the Pantai River causes Almayer to begin building a new house in his compound, not far removed from the one in which he is living. He wants a house fine enough to receive the British. When the project is abandoned and the Dutch are left in nominal power, Almayer stops work on his new house. A company of Dutch seamen christens the structure Almayer's Folly. Lakamba, the native rajah, has a compound across the river from Almayer's home. There he lives with his women, his slaves, and his principal aide, Babalatchi. Lakamba keeps close watch on Almayer as he leaves for several days at a time with a few of his men. After a time, Almayer gives up his trips and settles down to empty daydreams on his rotten wharf. His native wife despises him. Nina's presence in Sambir offers another problem for Almayer for the young men of the settlement are eyeing her with interest. One day Dain Maroola, the handsome son of a Malayan rajah, comes sailing up the river in a brig to trade with Almayer. After conversations with Lakamba and long conferences with Almayer, Dain gets the gunpowder he seeks. Meanwhile, he falls passionately in love with Nina. One night she comes into the women's room in her father's house and discovers her mother counting out the money Dain is giving her in payment for Nina Mrs Almayr was arranging meetings between Nina and Dain and giving them warning at the approach of Almayr Mrs Almayr wishes her daughter to remain native She has a deep distrust of white men and their ways Dain goes away promising that he will return to help Almayr in locating the hidden gold mine When he does return he sees Almayr for just a moment and then hurries to see Lakamba He tells the rajah that his brig fell into the hands of the Dutch and that he narrowly escaped with one slave Most of his men were killed and in a day or two the Dutch will be up the Pantai looking for him After this interview Lakamba tells Babalatchi he must poison Almayr before the arrival of the Dutch Now that Dain knows where the gold treasure is located Almayr is no longer needed If allowed to live he might reveal his secret to the white men The next morning the body of a Malay is found floating in the river The corpse is beyond recognition but it wears an anklet and a ring that belonged to Dain Almayr is overcome with grief for Dain was his last hope of finding the gold The Dutch officers who come looking for Dain tell how he escaped As the Dutch approach his brig the gunpowder it carries ignites and blows up the boat killing two of the Dutch Almayr promises his visitors that after they dine he will deliver Dain into their hands Meanwhile Babalatchi is telling Lakamba the true story of Dain Nina was waiting for the young Malay on the night of his conference with Lakamba and she took him to a secluded clearing farther up the river He is now hiding there The corpse that floated down the river is that of his slave who died when the canoe overturned Mrs Almayr suggested that Dain put
