AMERICA'S CHANGING POPULATION: Census Monograph Series, The Population of the United States in the 1980s

HAZEL MORROW-JONES*
Ohio State University

ABSTRACT: This commentary reviews six of the 11 monographs in the Census Monograph Series, The Population of the United States in the 1980s. The series was written for the National Committee for Research on the 1980 Census. The several volumes were published in 1986, 1987, and 1988 by the Russell Sage Foundation.

INTRODUCTION

This census monograph series follows in the footsteps of a group of independent analyses of past US censuses. As in the earlier studies, the authors chosen for the 1980 series are well-respected scholars drawn from a variety of fields. The cooperation and assistance of the U.S. Bureau of the Census was an essential part of the work and it was supported by the Social Science Research Council, the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, and the Russell Sage Foundation. Additional funding came from the Ford Foundation, the National Science Foundation, the National Institute on Aging, and the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development.

Charles Westoff, Chairman and Executive Director of the National Committee for Research on the 1980 Census, states the series objectives in his preface:

The ultimate goal of the National Committee and its sponsors has been to produce a definitive, accurate, and comprehensive picture of the U.S. population in the 1980s, a picture that would be primarily descriptive but also enriched by a historical perspective and a sense of the challenges for the future inherent in the trends of today.
