Korschak, 2003 The purpose of this study was to examine two instructional methods for delivering a radar operators training class for members of a municipal police department The first method examined was the traditional classroom based training with a certified radar instructor The second method was a computer based training CBT course based on the instructional material from the classroom based course The CBT course was administered on CD ROM using the police department s Windows c based computers This study compared the two methods of delivery to determine if the CBT course was as effective as the traditional classroom based course Effectiveness was measured by the completion times of the two courses examination scores and overall participant satisfaction levels These measures were conducted using quasi experimental design that involved two sample groups The total population was sixty nine police officers The sample contained fourteen participants divided into two equal groups of seven. The independent variable was the instructional method. The dependent variables were the course completion times, examination scores, and the satisfaction levels of the participants. Of the two groups of police officers, Group 1 received the CBT for radar operators while Group 2 received the traditional classroom training. Data was gathered regarding the completion times, test results, and participant satisfaction levels of the two courses. A statistical analysis of the data was conducted to determine the difference in course completion times, test scores, and participant satisfaction levels between the two courses.

Criminal Justice Today Frank Schmalleger, 2016-02-15. This is the eBook of the printed book and may not include any media, website access codes, or print supplements that may come packaged with the bound book. The gold standard for introductory criminal justice texts. Best selling and time tested. Criminal Justice Today: An Introductory Text for the 21st Century continues to lead the field as the gold standard for introductory criminal justice texts. Its comprehensive coverage focuses on the crime picture in America and on the three traditional elements of the criminal justice system: police, courts, and corrections. Building upon the theme of individual freedom versus personal security, it challenges students to evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of the American justice system as it adapts to the needs of a complex and rapidly changing society. An instructor and student favorite, the Fourteenth Edition continues its tradition of thorough analysis of today's issues in an easy-to-read format. Criminal Justice Today 14e is also available via REVEL, an interactive learning environment that enables students to read, practice, and study in one continuous experience. Learn more: Translation Quality Assessment

Malcolm Williams, 2004. Outlining an original discourse-based model for translation quality assessment that goes beyond conventional microtextual error analysis, this ground-breaking new work by Malcolm Williams explores the potential of transferring reasoning and argument as the prime criterion of translation quality. Assessment through error analysis is inevitably based on an error count, an unsatisfactory means of establishing and justifying differences in quality that forces the evaluator to focus on subsentence elements rather than on the translator's success in conveying the key messages of the source text. Williams counters that a judgement of translation quality should be based primarily on the degree to which the translator has adequately rendered the reasoning or argument structure. An assessment of six aspects of argument structure is proposed: argument macrostructure, propositional functions, conjunctives, types of arguments, figures of speech, and narrative strategy. Williams illustrates the approach using
