The Social Contexts of Criminal Sentencing Martha A. Myers, Susette M. Talarico, 2012-12-06 Historically the announcement and invocation of criminal penalties were public spectacles Today fear of crime and disaffection with the criminal justice system guarantee that this public fascination with punishment continues In the past decade virtually every legislature in the country has undertaken sentencing reform in the hope that public concern with crime would be allayed and disparities in criminal sentences would be reduced if not eliminated Scholars have intensified their longstanding preoccupation with discrimination and the sources of disparate treatment during sentencing issues that continue to fuel contemporary reform efforts As documented in Chapter 1 empirical research on sentencing has concentrated much of its attention on the offender Only recently have attempts been made to embed sentencing in its broader organizational and social contexts Our study extends these attempts by quantitatively analyzing the relationship between the offender and the social contexts in which he or she is sentenced We use data on felony sentencing in Georgia between 1976 and 1985 to ask three questions The first addresses an issue of perennial concern during sentencing how important are offender attributes both those of explicit legal relevance and traits whose legal relevance is questionable or nonexistent The second question directs attention to the social contexts of sentencing and asks whether they directly affect sentencing outcomes

The U.S. Sentencing Guidelines Dean J. Champion, 1989-11-03 A distinguished group of noted criminal justice specialists here examines the impact of the new U.S. sentencing guidelines imposed in 1987 on law enforcement, the prosecution and courts, and corrections. Although these guidelines were created with the expressed purpose of increasing judicial fairness and reducing prison overcrowding, the contributors argue that their long-range effects will be to aggravate present overcrowding problems to intolerably high levels. To make their case, contributors address individually such issues as plea bargaining, the new role of parole and corrections officers, the likely effects of the scheduled abolition of the parole board in 1992, and more. Both students of criminal justice and practicing parole and corrections officers will find these chapters enlightening reading. Following an introductory overview that puts the U.S. sentencing guidelines in perspective, two chapters discuss their impact on law enforcement officer discretion and crime control and deterrence. Turning to an exploration of the courts, the contributors address prosecutorial discretion in plea bargaining, judicial discretion and sentencing disparities, case processing and sentencing alternatives, and how predictions of dangerousness affect the sentencing process. In their analysis of the relationship between the sentencing guidelines and corrections trends, the contributors examine issues such as community-based corrections and privatization, inmate litigation and constitutional issues, and recidivism. Finally, editor Dean Champion offers a perceptive synthesis of the volume by summarizing the serious problems posed by imposition of the U.S. sentencing guidelines. Four appendices provide additional related information for the student and researcher.
