

IGUANODONTS

The plant-eating Iguanodonts appeared about 170 million years ago. This successful group spread throughout the world. They first emerged in the middle of the Jurassic period, and thrived right through to the end of the Cretaceous.

Slow movers

Iguanodonts looked like hypsilophodonts, but they were much bigger. Some Iguanodonts grew to be 30 feet long. They had bulky, hip-boned bodies and thicker legs than the hypsilophodonts. Because of their size and weight, Iguanodonts probably could not move very quickly.

DINO DATA

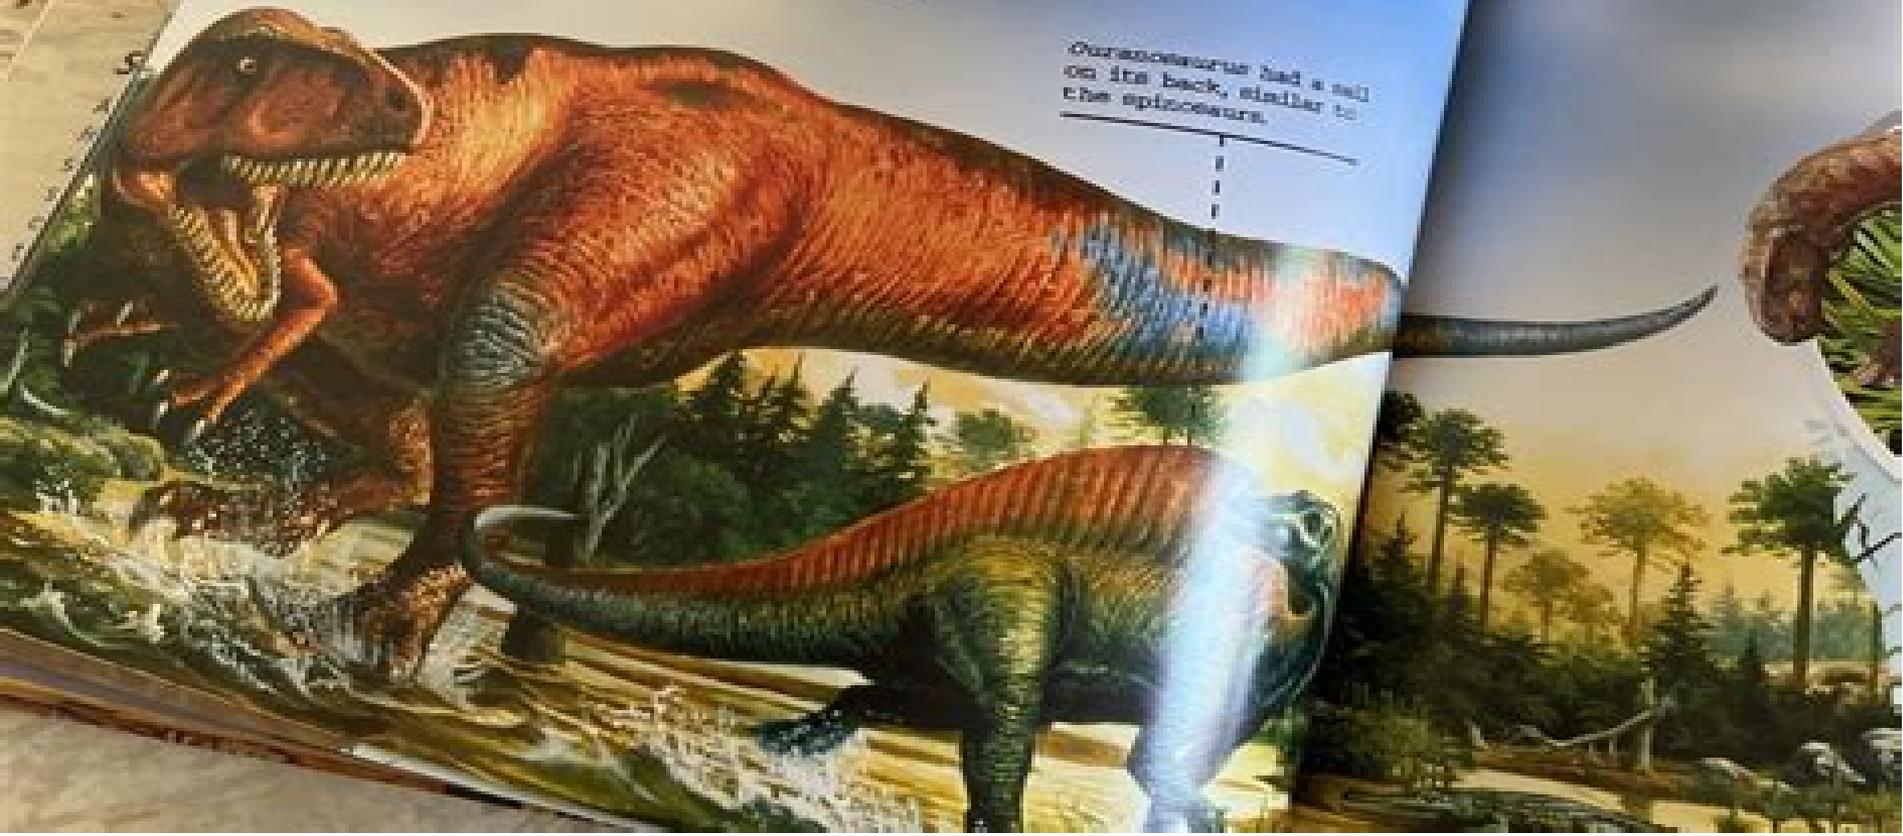

Iguanodonts had strong, beak-like jaws. The ribs forked into the socket between the smaller pieces of the Ouranosaurus had a sail on its back, similar to the spinosaurs.

Grazing animals

Iguanodonts lived like modern plant-eating animals. They moved in herds, looking for land to graze on.

Iguanodonts mainly ate plants. They would nip with their beaklike jaws. Their ridged cheek teeth would grind the tough leaves to a pulp.
