A complete thought (or sentence) contains a subject and a predicate. That means you can identify a "who/what" and a "what about it."

Subject (who/what) | Predicate (what about it)

Sometimes, sentences contain compound subjects or predicates. That means there are two subjects or predicates, like in the example below.

The pack of dogs and the garbage men chasing them ran around the corner and went into the parking lot.

Directions: Circle the subject and underline the predicate in each example below.

1. Julie and I went down to the school yard.
2. She got a ticket to ride the rollercoaster and then bought a slushy.
3. My new shoes and socks got dirty.
4. My gum popped out of my mouth and fell on the floor.
5. My sister went to the movies and then joined her friends.
