ABSTRACT

This study analyses the sustainability of cultural heritage and urban tourism in historic cities. The study areas are Melaka, Malaysia and Istanbul, Türkiye, as both cities are rich in cultural heritage that attracts many tourists due to their historical significance. These cities face urban problems due to rapid population growth and economic development. Understanding the interaction between urban tourism development, cultural heritage preservation, and socio-cultural and economic repercussions on the cities may be learned through analysing cultural heritage and urban tourism in these cities. The objectives of this paper are: i) to analyse aspects of Melaka and Istanbul's preservation of their cultural heritage, growth of their tourism industries and general urban tourism experiences, and ii) to conduct a comparative analysis of each city's approach to cultural heritage and tourism. The method of this study is using reviews that include an analysis of texts on the history, philosophy, theory and concepts of cultural heritage and urban tourism in both sites. The findings of this study highlight Melaka's and Istanbul's strategic distribution and concentration of heritage attractions, effectively creating immersive urban heritage tourism experiences. Through character appraisals, these cities showcase the seamless integration of historical and contemporary elements, offering valuable insights into how distinct identities contribute to their success as vibrant tourism destinations.

Urban heritage is essential for maintaining a nation's tangible and intangible cultural and historical identity. It encompasses architectural, historical, social, and cultural elements in cities, such as buildings, monuments, public spaces, and traditional neighbourhoods. Urban heritage contributes to the distinct character and identity of a city or region, making it more unique and attractive to residents and visitors. It also serves as a significant tourist attraction, attracting visitors interested in experiencing the cultural and historical aspects of a nation. Melaka, Malaysia and Istanbul, Türkiye are cities recognised by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) for their cultural and historical significance. To maintain the long-term viability of urban heritage tourism, it is necessary to comprehend the dynamics and characteristics of what makes the cities unique as they are (McKercher & Cros, 2002; Liu, 2017), so that they can sustain alongside modern developments in the future. As such, this study aims to appraise and compare the characteristics of Melaka and Istanbul to establish an understanding of
