Artificial Intelligence And Human Institutions:

Artificial Intelligence and Human Institutions Richard Ennals, 2012-12-06 Artificial Intelligence and Human Institutions argues that successful applications of artificial intelligence are possible only within an understanding of human institutions and the limitations of technology Products of artificial intelligence research are becoming widely available to non specialists using low cost computer systems but there has been a lack of communication between researchers and community groups Taking the weak AI position the book explores the way insights and tools from artificial intelligence can be valuable in coming to terms with real world problems Drawing on the author's extensive practical experience in AI research and research management the book brings together case studies from the fields of education training business engineering defence health and community work and suggests future directions This book deals with advanced concepts of artificial intelligence for non specialist readers while providing an introduction to state of the art developments It seeks to use AI concepts to illuminate the practical and theoretical concerns of institutions and organisations opening up possibilities for new areas of collaborative work and revealing new sources of references and ideas This is the latest title in the Artificial Intelligence and Society series and will be of interest to lecturers and students in AI education social and political sciences and business studies

Artificial Intelligence and Human Institutions John Richard Ennals, 1991 Post-Human Institutions and Organizations Ismael Al-Amoudi, Emmanuel Lazega, 2019-11-11 When the Matrix trilogy was published in the mid 1980s it introduced to mass culture a number of post human tropes about the conscious machines that have haunted our collective imaginaries ever since This volume explores the social representations and significance of technological developments especially AI and human enhancement that have started to transform our human agency It uses these developments to revisit theories of the human mind and its essential characteristics a first person perspective concerns and reflexivity It looks at how the smart machines are used as agents of change in the basic institutions and organisations that hold contemporary societies together for example in the family and the household in commercial corporations in health institutions or in the military Its main purpose is to enrich the ongoing public discussion of the social and political implications of the smart machines by looking at the extent to which they further digitalise and bureaucratise the world in particular by asking whether they are used to develop techno totalitarian societies that corrode normativity and solidarity

AI Magazine, 1992 Identity, Institutions and Governance in an AI World Peter Bloom, 2020-01-10 The 21st century is on the verge of a possible total economic and political revolution Technological advances in robotics computing and digital communications have the potential to completely transform how people live and work Even more radically humans will soon be interacting with artificial intelligence AI as a normal and essential part of their daily existence What is needed now more than ever is to rethink social relations to meet the challenges of this soon to arrive smart world This book proposes an original theory of trans human relations for this coming future Drawing on insights from organisational studies critical theory psychology and futurism it will chart for readers the coming changes to identity institutions and governance in a world populated by intelligent human and non human actors alike It will be characterised by a fresh emphasis on infusing programming with values of social justice protecting the rights and views of all forms of consciousness and creating the structures and practices necessary for encouraging a culture of mutual intelligent design To do so means moving beyond our anthropocentric worldview of today and expanding our assumptions about the state of tomorrow s politics institutions laws and even everyday existence Critically such a profound shift demands transcending humanist paradigms of a world created for and by humans and instead opening ourselves to a new reality where non human intelligence and cyborgs are increasingly central
