Beyond the Silver Screen tells the history of women's engagement with filmmaking and film culture in twentieth century Australia. In doing so it explores an array of often hidden ways women in Australia have creatively worked with film. Beyond the Silver Screen examines film in a broad sense considering feature filmmaking alongside government documentaries and political films. It also focusses on women's work regulating films and supporting film culture through organising film societies and workshops to encourage female filmmakers. As such it tells a new narrative of Australian film history. Beyond the Silver Screen reveals the variety of roles film has in Australian society. It presents film as a medium of creative and political expression which women have engaged with in diverse ways throughout the twentieth century. Gender roles and gendered ideologies operating within society at large have influenced women's opportunities to work with film and how their filmwork is recognised. Beyond the Silver Screen shows women's sustained involvement with film is best understood as political and cultural action.      Daughters of the Governor Vivian Stuart, 2022-11-14

Kathy Gregson was still a tomboy after a year at her finishing school in Paris. When she came out to India to join her family in the province where her father was Governor she found it very difficult to accept the rigid protocol which was a part of life at the hill station. The social errors she committed such as forgetting names and faces were a great worry to her. Why couldn't she be more like her sister Harriet seven years her senior who always did and said the right thing. But when Kathy met tall fair haired Desmond Conroy at a polo game she knew that she would have no trouble in remembering his name or his face and she also realised that Harriet knew Desmond much better than she admitted.      APAIS, Australian Public Affairs Information Service, 1988 Vol for 1963 includes section Current Australian serials a subject list      Shooting at the Moon Kevin Ayers, 2020-11-01
