

The 7 Laws of Teaching

- Training → acquisition of powers
 - Regular exercise to reach full growth
- Teaching → acquisition of knowledge
 - Communicate knowledge useful in gaining other knowledge
 - Stimulate the love of learning and habits of self-study
- Training and Teaching are inseparable
- Proper exercise of intellectual powers in the acquisition, elaboration, and application of knowledge
- Cramming of knowledge without exercise of the powers is useless
- Discovering the laws of any process brings that process under his control
- Communication → assisting another to reproduce the same knowledge within his mind
- The 7 Laws
 - Teacher → one who knows the lesson → know the lesson fully
 - Learner → one who attends to the lesson → know teaching can happen without attention
 - Mode of Communication → language used as a medium b/t teacher and learner → use language understood by both—this means that vocabulary (Grammar) of the subject is most important
 - Lesson/Truth → applicable by means of truth already known by the learner → begin with what is already known by the student
 - Teacher Work → arousing the pupil's mind to form desired conception/thought → the audience must be considered in determining method
 - Student Work → thinking into one's own understanding a new idea/truth → require the student to reproduce the lesson in his own words (COL)
 - Review Work → the test and proof that the truth has been acquired and fastening it within the mind → review, review, review
- "Good order is a condition precedent to good teaching."
- Enthusiasm is incredibly important
 - Teacher must show a love for the subject and a love for learning

The Law of the Teacher

- To learn the law of something is to learn its nature
- The Law of the Teacher → "The teacher must know that which he would teach."
 - Something cannot come from nothing.
 - The knowledge must be present within him.
 - The highest level of knowledge of a thing is knowing a thing not just in itself but in its deeper significance and importance outside itself—How does a thing bring us to a knowledge of God? How does this true assist in showing how other truths bring knowledge of God?
- Lesson planning does not become less important the longer you teach
- Truth is only known through its resemblances to other truths
