

The Healthy System Indicators

The Healthy System Indicators are:

A clear definition of the issue, locally/ nationally understood across all partners, and co-created with people with lived experience.

A clear understanding of local need, that has been assessed, understood and is regularly updated.

Clear outcomes set by and accountable to people with lived experience.

Shared understanding of what success looks like across all partners.

Shared responsibility for the goal and outcomes, with common goals that all partners are working towards.

The right people around the table, with partners creating the strategy, planning together and committed to joint planning and working.

Working in partnership, with clear lines of communication and being 'on the same side' as people you are serving.

Strong systems leadership and appropriate accountability structures in place.

A common approach to data sharing so that people working in the system have a consistent understanding of how data is shared, and data is stored and acted on appropriately.

A learning culture in which partners feel safe to suggest and try new things, collectively learning from new experiences, mistakes and next practice.

A workforce that is responsive to relational injury and where trauma informed ways of working are the norm.*

This is a non-exhaustive list based on our own experience. You may have your own suggestions for other indicators that are context or subject matter specific.
