

Nearwork results in lag of accommodative response and associated hyperopic defocus (pt. A in accommodative stimulus/response curve in Fig. 3). Dashed lines represent light rays from object.

Subsequent viewing at far results in a small transient myopia (nearwork-induced transient myopia).

Plus lens represents equivalent amount of residual transient myopia. Far-to-near carry-over of nearwork-induced transient myopia due to slow decay of crystalline lens power can be represented by an equivalent plus lens. Thus, when returning to nearwork, the effective accommodative stimulus is reduced slightly, and the accommodative response is also reduced (i.e., moved down from A to B in the accommodative stimulus/response curve in Fig. 3), resulting in a slight decrease in accommodative error, or retinal defocus.
