international development theory and practice Accountability in NGOs Olugbenga Aladejobi Coker, King's College London. Department of Management, 2012 The study of Non Governmental Organisations NGOs accountability has lagged behind that in the private sector in the areas of empirical details and theoretical foundation This thesis analyses the research question How do NGOs practice accountability and what is the theoretical basis for this practice To answer this question the study develops a descriptive framework that classifies accountability practices along two broad dimensions one based on the form of giving accounts which could be process or performance and the other based on the form of holding to account which could be contractual or communal The resulting four possibilities were built into a framework around which a theory was developed and used to guide the empirical investigation in 6 NGOs 3 in the UK and 3 in Africa The study rejects the rigidly structured research approach of the rationalist school and the completely unstructured approach of the phenomenological school In regard to the exploratory nature of the research question it adopts a middle range thinking approach proceeding with a partly structured process and a prior theory in skeletal form fleshed out with the findings as the study progressed The research finds that the bulk of the resources utilised by NGOs are derived from the global north while the bulk of the needs for NGOs services are in the global south and that this influences accountability practices across both sides of the hemisphere Because of the nature of NGO s objectives and activities it is argued traditional accounting s capability to provide a full account of NGOs performance is severely limited This coupled with the involvement of multiple stakeholders with varied needs has resulted in the use of multiple systems of accountability Neuroscience and Legal Responsibility Nicole A Vincent, 2013-01-08 Adopting a broadly compatibilist approach this volume s authors argue that the behavioral and mind sciences do not threaten the moral foundations of legal responsibility Rather these sciences provide fresh insight into human agency and updated criteria as well as powerful diagnostic and intervention tools for assessing and altering minds Cases on Academic Program Redesign for Greater Racial and Social Justice Cain-Sanschagrin, Ebony, Filback, Robert A., Crawford, Jenifer, 2021-11-19 Faculty and students confront persistent racial economic and social inequities in higher education locally nationally and globally To counter these inequities there has been a recent focus on universities providing an inclusive curriculum that serves the needs of students from a wide range of backgrounds Inclusive and equitable courses and instruction are crucial in today s world as calls for racial and social justice grow particularly in higher education Universities and instructors must take action and make changes to best serve their students Cases on Academic Program Redesign for Greater Racial and Social Justice provides an equity oriented practical guide for those in higher education who are engaged in the work of curricular reform or program development It also explores practices and approaches to curriculum development that consider program quality and equitable outcomes as mutually beneficial and necessary outcomes Covering a range of topics such as antiracism and mindful hiring it is ideal for teachers instructional designers curricula developers administrators academics professors educators researchers those working in higher education and students Quality and

Tadros,2020-06-18 To Do To Die To Reason Why offers a new account of the ethics of war and the legal regulation of war It is especially concerned with the conduct of individuals including whether they are required to follow orders to go to war what moral constraints there are on killing in war what makes people liable to be killed in war and the extent to which the laws of war ought to reflect the morality of war Victor Tadros defends a largely anti authority view about the morality of war and notable moral constraints on killing in war such as the Doctrine of Doing and Allowing and a version of the Doctrine of Double Effect However he argues that a much wider range of people are liable to be harmed or killed in war than is normally thought to be the case on grounds of both causal involvement and fairness And it argues that the laws of war should converge much more closely with the morality of war than is currently the case Standards of Practice for
