The Analysis of Animal Bones from Archeological Sites Richard G. Klein, Kathryn Cruz-Urbe, 1984-10-15 In growing numbers archeologists are specializing in the analysis of excavated animal bones as clues to the environment and behavior of ancient peoples This pathbreaking work provides a detailed discussion of the outstanding issues and methods of bone studies that will interest zooarcheologists as well as paleontologists who focus on reconstructing ecologies from bones Because large samples of bones from archeological sites require tedious and time consuming analysis the authors also offer a set of computer programs that will greatly simplify the bone specialist s job After setting forth the interpretive framework that governs their use of numbers in faunal analysis Richard G Klein and Kathryn Cruz Uribe survey various measures of taxonomic abundance review methods for estimating the sex and age composition of a fossil species sample and then give examples to show how these measures and sex age profiles can provide useful information about the past In the second part of their book the authors present the computer programs used to calculate and analyze each numerical measure or count discussed in the earlier chapters These elegant and original programs written in BASIC can easily be used by anyone with a microcomputer or with access to large mainframe computers

Geological Approaches to Coral Reef Ecology Richard B. Aronson, 2007-03-09 This book provides a unique perspective on the destruction both natural and human caused of coral reef ecosystems Reconstructing the ecological history of coral reefs the authors evaluate whether recent dramatic changes are novel events or part of a long term trend or cycle The text combines principles of geophysics paleontology and marine sciences with real time observation examining the interacting causes of change hurricane damage predators disease rising sea level nutrient loading global warming and ocean acidification Predictions about the future of coral reefs inspire strategies for restoration and management of ecosystems Useful for students and professionals in ecology and marine biology including environmental managers

Conservation Palaeobiology of Marine Ecosystems R. Nawrot, S. Dominici, A. Tomašových, M. Zuschin, 2023-07-03 Conservation palaeobiology tracks the history of ecosystems based on the fossil record to guide conservation decisions and contribute to the theoretical foundations of conservation biology The accelerating pace of global change requires better understanding of the long term resilience and adaptive capacities of ecosystems Fossil assemblages in outcrops and cores together with surface accumulations of skeletal remains represent unique archives of past ecosystem dynamics and baseline community states prior to anthropogenic impacts. However, as biological data retrieved from fossil and death assemblages cannot be treated in isolation, conservation palaeobiology integrates palaeontological and geological tools to account for the nature of the stratigraphic record. This volume brings together studies that demonstrate how combining marine palaeoecological records with other types of geohistorical data, taphonomic, sedimentological, geochronological, geochemical, can inform biodiversity conservation and ecosystem management. The papers highlight novel approaches and challenges in applying geohistorical data to conservation problems, discuss the limitations imposed by time averaging, and offer both deep and near time perspectives on conservation palaeobiology of marine ecosystems.

From Death Assemblage to Fossil Assemblage Peter Colin Dawson, 1995

The Analysis of Archaeological Insect Assemblages Harry K. Kenward, 1978. Work performed in the Environmental Archaeology Unit, University of York, has demonstrated the potential archaeological importance of insect assemblages but has emphasized the inadequacy of previous techniques of interpretation. The first part of the paper considers the value and problems of the ecological mosaic approach to reconstructing past conditions. The second part discusses some new methods of inspecting death assemblages designed to overcome at least some of the problems using new methods of presenting data on material from a variety of contexts in York and Durham. Finally, the possibilities of using more sophisticated methods of statistical analysis are further explored.
