The Death Cycle Machine Charlotte Mayerson, 1995

Douglas Biber's new book extends and refines the research and methodology reported in his ground breaking Variation Across Speech and Writing CUP 1988. In Dimensions of Register Variation he gives a linguistic analysis of register in four widely differing languages: English, Nukulaelae, Tuvaluan, Korean, and Somali. Using the multi-dimensional analytical framework employed in his earlier work, Biber carries out a principled comparison of both synchronic and diachronic patterns of variation across the four languages. Striking similarities as well as differences emerge, allowing Biber to predict for the first time cross-linguistic universals of register variation. This major new work will provide the foundation for the further investigation of cross-linguistic universals governing the pattern of discourse variation across registers and will be of wide interest to any scholar interested in style, register, and literacy.

Death Cycle Charles L. Grant, 2017-06-17. At first it seems like an ordinary street in an ordinary neighborhood. But kids sense there's something different about Midnight Place. It's nothing tangible, just an eerie sensation that won't go away. Walk down the street, a street like Midnight Place, and all too soon the terror is real. Wherever they go, Roz Jordan and her friends are followed by a mysterious motorcycle that seems to appear out of thin air. At first they are intrigued, but when a classmate is hit and killed by this wild rider, everyone is frightened. For Roz, there is something eerily familiar about this phantom rider. She keeps thinking of someone, someone who used to live on Midnight Place. Will this ghostly rider destroy Roz and her friends?

Death Cycle Simon Lake, 1993. Roz Jordan and her friends are intrigued by the mysterious motorcyclist that seems to follow them everywhere until a classmate is hit and killed by the phantom rider, and Roz begins to suspect that she is being stalked.

Death by a Thousand Cuts Arthur F. Huber, 2002. Technological progress in a number of areas, to include aerodynamics, microelectronics, sensors, microelectromechanical systems, MEMS, micromanufacturing, and more, is ushering in the possibility for the affordable development and acquisition of a new class of military systems known as micro air vehicles (MAV). MAVs are a subset of uninhabited air vehicles (UAV) that are up to two orders of magnitude smaller than the manned systems that permeate our contemporary life. Recent advances in miniaturization may make possible vehicles that can carry out important military missions that heretofore were beyond our reach or could only be attained at great risk or resource expenditure. These missions will be possible if MAVs can fulfill their potential to attain certain attributes, to include low cost, low weight, little to no logistical footprint, mission versatility, range, endurance, stealth, and precision. A review of the literature in this area indicates that the military potential of this emerging field remains on the technological push side of the equation, with little to no requirements pull from the user community. Accordingly, concepts of operations deriving from the war-fighting community, particularly the United States Air Force (USAF), are sparse. At a higher level, the potential of micro air vehicles opens up new possibilities in the formulation of military strategies that require investigation. This paper provides an outline of the contemporary technological dimension of MAVs and contemplates how they might be used to enhance Air Force operations
