Borscht Belt Bungalows Irwin Richman,2004-02-05 Every year between 1920 and 1970 almost one million of New York City's Jewish population summered in the Catskills Hundreds of thousands still do While much has been written about grand hotels like Grossinger's and the Concord little has appeared about the more modest bungalow colonies and kuchaleins cook for yourself places where more than 80 percent of Catskill visitors stayed These were not glamorous places and middle class Jews today remember the colonies with either aversion or fondness Irwin Richman's narrative anecdotes and photos recapture everything from the traffic jams leaving the city to the strategies for sneaking into the casinos of the big hotels He brings to life the attitudes of the renters and the owners the differences between the social activities and swimming pools advertised and what people actually received He reminisces about the changing fashion of the guests and owners everything that made summers memorable The author remembers his boyhood what it was like to spend summers outside the city swimming in the Neversink noodling around and helping with the bungalow operation while Grandpa charged the tenants and acted as president of Congregation Bnai Israel of Woodbourne N Y He also traces the changes in the Catskills including the influx of Hasidic families Richman talks about what it's like to go back and to see the ghosts of resorts along the roads he once traveled

Catskill Summers Mel Senator,2000-11-13 Summers in the country had special meaning for people who lived in the city during the 1940s and 1950s Away from the dirt and noise they could sit in a lawn chair and play a game of cards or go for a walk or pick blueberries on a lazy afternoon Then to cap it off they would pay fifty cents and see a real show at a ritzy Catskill mountain hotel While all this was special for them it was even more important that they bring their children out of the city to be part of the rural past they so often dreamed about This is a story about life in a bungalow colony in the Catskill Mountains of the 1940s and 1950s It is the experience that thousands of people from the city shared when going to the country for the summer It represents a delicious moment in time for those families who made it out of the city and into the wonders of the Catskill countryside

The Catskills in Vintage Postcards Irwin Richman,1999 From the 1890s through the 1920s the postcard was an extraordinarily popular means of communication Many of the postcards produced during this golden age and even some from later years can today be considered works of art Postcard photographers traveled the length and breadth of the nation snapping photographs of busy street scenes documenting local landmarks and assembling crowds of local children only too happy to pose for a picture These images printed as postcards and sold in general stores and five and dimes across the country survive as telling reminders of an important era in America's history This fascinating new history of the Catskills of New York showcases more than two hundred of the best most evocative vintage postcards available
