

The Elements of Art

Understanding the Elements of Art enables us to describe and analyse artworks and communicate our thoughts using art specific language.

COLOUR: is produced by rays of light produced at different lengths. It helps to describe what we see. Eg. Red, green, orange, yellow etc.

LINE: A line is usually a thin mark. Lines can be long or short, thick or thin, light or dark and different shapes. Line is usually present somewhere in most artworks.

-tone: Different shades of a colour from light to dark.

SHAPE: An area or form with a definite outline. Eg. Circle, rectangle, square, triangle, parallelogram, hexagon etc.

TEXTURE: How a surface feels or how it looks like it would feel. Eg smooth, rough, fuzzy, grainy, rocky, shiny, sharp, flaky, dry, creamy, spiky etc.

Definitions Of Art:

Definitions of Art Stephen Davies, 2018-08-06 In the last thirty years work in analytic philosophy of art has flourished and it has given rise to considerably controversy Stephen Davies describes and analyzes the definition of art as it has been discussed in Anglo American philosophy during this period and in the process introduces his own perspective on ways in which we should reorient our thinking Davies conceives of the debate as revealing two basic conflicting approaches the functional and the procedural to the questions of whether art can be defined and if so how As the author sees it the functionalist believes that an object is a work of art only if it performs a particular function usually that of providing a rewarding aesthetic experience By contrast the proceduralist believes that something is an artwork only if it has been created according to certain rules and procedures Davies attempts to demonstrate the fruitfulness of viewing the debate in terms of this framework and he develops new arguments against both points of view although he is more critical of functional than of procedural definitions Because it has generated so much of the recent literature Davies starts his analysis with a discussion of Morris Weitz s germinal paper The Role of Theory in Aesthetics He goes on to examine other important works by Arthur Danto George Dickie and Ben Tilghman and develops in his critiques original arguments on such matters of the artificiality of artworks and the relevance of artists intentions

The De-Definition of Art Harold Rosenberg, 1983-06-15 Like the great German critic Walter Benjamin Rosenberg is a master of dialectics whose sense of art is continuous with his sense of society and also like Benjamin bears no taint of compromised out of work radicalism Instead his radicalism is very much at work enabling him to spot and skewer fallacies false logic and the camouflaged nudity that is a large part of the art emperor s new wardrobe The De definition of Art detects with great sensitivity the forces that are deflecting and pressuring art in the direction of esthetic and moral nullity Jack Kroll Newsweek

What is Art? Tiziana Andina, 2017-11-20 What is art is one of the classic questions that philosophy has addressed over the ages from the ancients to today Taking as its starting point debates over the various definitions of art found in history this article presents and discusses some of the major theories offered by both the analytic and continental traditions It then looks at the theoretical reasons that led twentieth century philosophy to reopen the question of definition and in many cases inquire into the ontology of art itself Finally a series of considerations are addressed to help shift the problem of definition onto a new plane one that is able to respond to the challenges of the performing and participatory arts which more than any other form of art present particularly unconventional ontologies

A Comparative Study of Art Definitions and Their Application to the Art of Oral Interpretation Hilda Ovidia Hendrickson, 1929

Contemporary Definitions of Art and the Metamorphosis of Ordinary Objects Jeffery S. Wissman, 2001 This thesis examines three definitions of art that were inspired by Morris Weitz s assertion that art has no definable essence The first two attempts define art in terms of artworlds Arthur Danto speaks of an artworld as the artist or spectator's knowledge of the history of artistic theory whereas George Dickie characterizes the artworld as the practices of artists and the appreciation of art by spectators within an institutional framework For both of these notions of the artworld the creation or appropriation of art requires an artist who is aware of or understands that art is being created Jerrold Levinson on the other hand rejects Danto and Dickie's artworlds and instead defines art recursively in terms of a complex relationship involving a person's present intentions and the actual ways in which artworks have been approached or regarded in the past For Levinson art can be created by persons who are not aware that art has been created All three definitions share at least two important features 1 they all want to account for the art status of ordinary objects that have been appropriated or indexed by an artist who did not herself create the work and 2 they all share the common assumption that the concept of art must be understood in terms of non-exhibited properties that relate artworks to a context The result of my discussion of Danto Dickie and Levinson's definitions is that while the intentional creation of art might be a necessary condition for art status I am inclined to agree with Weitz that there are no conditions that are jointly necessary and sufficient for an object being classified as art Each definition is thus a worthwhile contribution that turns our attention to an important context-sensitive feature of art but does not provide an essence for the concept of art

Contents of Contracts and Unfair Terms Mindy Chen-Wishart, Stefan Vogenauer, Hugh G. Beale, 2020 Studies in the Contract Laws of Asia provides an authoritative and current introduction to the contract laws of major Asian jurisdictions and includes a bibliography of literature in the English language The series will identify and discuss the current controversies and debates amongst the stakeholders of the subject jurisdictions the likely direction of travel on these issues as well as the values and policies which shape the development of the law in these areas Furthermore it will examine how European sourced laws have acquired unique characteristics in the transplanted jurisdictions and compare these with the emerging shape of European contract law and other international instruments Each volume in the series will offer an insider's perspective into specific areas of contract law remedies formation parties contents vitiating factors change of circumstances illegality and public policy It will explore how these diverse jurisdictions address common problems encountered in contractual disputes and will offer a comparative assessment horizontally as between the Asian jurisdictions and vertically with source jurisdictions and international codes Book jacket
