

РУССКИЕ ШЛЕМЫ X—XIII вв.

1

В доспехе средневекового воина шлему принадлежало важнейшее место. Кроме боевого назначения, шлем часто служил знаком рыцарского ранга и соответственно этому украшался.

Об этом виде защитного доспеха писали почти все, кто занимался изучением древнерусского оружия. Одним из первых предметов, с которых началось систематическое изучение не только оружия, но и русских древностей вообще, был т. н. шлем князя Ярослава Всеволодовича, найденный в 1808 г. и определенный А. Н. Олениным¹, широко известный в исторической литературе. Долгое время основное внимание исследователей принадлежало шлемам позднего русского средневековья, разнообразно представленные в Оружейной палате Московского кремля и других музеях. Лишь в конце XIX — начале XX в. после больших курганных раскопок стали известны шлемы древнейшего периода русской истории. Попытку обобщить этот материал предпринял Н. Е. Бранденбург. Как показывают документы архива Артиллерийского исторического музея, последние годы жизни этот ученый усилительно собирал рисунки, чертежи, фотографии древних шлемов². С этой же целью Н. Е. Бранденбург посетил многие музеи и частные собрания. Он оставил ценные заметки и обширную переписку³. В Артиллерийском музее им была собрана редчайшая коллекция оружия из кожно-русских раскопок. Эта работа еще на стадии сбора материала была прервана со смертью ученого и оказалась на долго погребенной в архиве.

Много занимался шлемами оружейвед Э. Ленц. К данной теме Э. Ленц обращался неоднократно. Специально шлемам посвящена его последняя статья на немецком языке⁴. Среди дореволюционных русских археологов Э. Ленц являлся самым последовательным сторонником восточного происхождения русского оружия, в том числе и шлемов. В основу классификации боевого наголовья исследователь положил такой признак, как способ защиты лица. В результате было выделено четыре группы: 1) шлемы с наносником (представляющим одно целое с тульей), 2) с прикрепленным наносником, 3) без наносника, 4) шлемы с маской. Классификация
