Jones,2014-08-15 Today s Army faces an environment much different from that which it prepared for in the Cold War Massed armor battles on the plains of Europe for which the Army was trained and equipped have become much less likely while involvement in smaller and more limited conflict has become more probable Future conflict is more likely to resemble Grenada Panama or Somalia than Desert Storm As world demographics shift from rural to urban areas the cities will increasingly become areas of potential conflict They cannot be avoided as a likely battlefield and have already played a prominent part in Army combat operations in the last decade If the Army is to keep pace in this changing environment it must look to the cities when developing doctrine technology and force structure The close battlefield of Mogadishu or Panama City is much different from the premier training areas of the National Training Center or Hohenfels Yet aviators have been presented the dilemma of training for the latter environment and being deployed to the former For most aviators facing urban combat it is a matter of learning as they fight To avoid the high casualties and collateral damage likely in an urban fight against a determined opponent however Army aviation must train and prepare before they fight Attack helicopters are inextricably woven into the fabric of combined arms operations But for the Army to operate effectively as a combined arms team in an urban environment both aviators and the ground units they support must understand the capabilities and limitations attack helicopters bring to the battle This paper presents an historical perspective of how attack helicopters have already been used in this environment It also discusses the factors that make city fighting unique and the advantages and disadvantages for attack helicopter employment in an urban environment as well as implications for future urban conflicts Signal ,1993 Helicopter Gunships Wayne Mutza,2010 U S Army aviators pioneered the first helicopter gun platforms in the early 1950s Today helicopter gunships are the most unique element of rotary wing aviation redefining the term close air support As the ultimate development of the military helicopter these largely U S designed and built aircraft reign supreme as the premier attack platforms of modern aerial warfare Helicopter Gunships begins with the Vietnam War as the ultimate proving ground that first utilized helicopter gunships and saw the development of other rotary wing weapons systems as well This book also explores fascinating post war programs like the experimental Comanche Blackhawk and Apache Through in depth research and exclusive high quality photos noted author and helicopter expert Wayne Mutza examines in vivid detail the numerous weapon systems mated with a surprisingly wide variety of helicopters Attention is also given to helicopter gunships developed by other Free World countries and Communist nations
