Of Images:

Grammatology of Images Sigrid Weigel, 2022-08-16 Grammatology of Images radically alters how we approach images. Instead of asking for the history, power, or essence of images, Sigrid Weigel addresses imaging as such. The book considers how something visible gets transformed into an image. Weigel scrutinizes the moment of mise en apparence of making an appearance and the process of concealment that accompanies any imaging. Weigel reinterprets Derrida's and Freud's concept of the trace as that which must be thought before something exists. In doing so, she illuminates the threshold between traces and iconic images between something immaterial and its pictorial representation. Chapters alternate between general accounts of the line, the index, the effigy, and the cult image and case studies from the history of science, art, politics, and religion involving faces as indicators of emotion, caricatures as effigies of defamation, and angels as embodiments of transcendental ideas. Weigel's approach to images illuminates fascinating, unexpected correspondences between premodern and contemporary image practices between the history of religion and the modern sciences and between things that are and are not understood as art.

Physical and Biological Processing of Images O. J. Braddick, A. C. Sleight, 2012-12-06 This book consists of papers presented at an international symposium sponsored and organised by The Rank Prize Funds and held at The Royal Society London on 27-29 September 1982. Since the inception of the Funds, the Trustees and their Scientific Advisory Committee on Optoelectronics have considered that the scope of optoelectronics should extend to cover the question of how the eye transduces and processes optical information. The Funds have aimed to organise symposia on topics which, because of their interdisciplinary nature, were not well covered by other regular international scientific meetings. It was therefore very appropriate that the 1982 symposium should be on Physical and Biological Processing of Images. The purpose of the symposium was to bring together scientists working on the physiology and psychology of visual perception with those developing machine systems for image processing and understanding. The papers were planned in such a way as to emphasise questions of how image analysing systems can be organised, as well as the principles underlying them, rather than the detailed biophysics and structure of sensory systems or the specific design of hardware devices. As far as possible, related topics in biological and artificial systems were considered side by side.
