

WHAT ARE CONSTELLATIONS?

Constellations are small patterns of stars in the sky. Each pattern has its own name. They are often named after the object or figure that they resemble, such as a lion or a cross. The stars in a constellation may not be very close to each other in reality—they only appear to be close when viewed from Earth.

WHAT IS THE HUNTER?

The constellation of Orion is named after a hunter of the same name in Greek mythology. The constellation looks like a hunter holding a sword. The hunter's head, shoulders, three-starred belt, legs, and sword can be seen. Orion is one of the brightest constellations in the night sky.

WHAT IS THE LARGEST CONSTELLATION?

Hydra. It is named after a many-headed water snake.

SINCE WHEN HAVE PEOPLE GROUPED STARS INTO CONSTELLATIONS?

At least 10,000 years ago. Some cave paintings in Europe from that time show groups of stars like the ones we see today.

HOW DID CONSTELLATIONS HELP TRAVELERS?

They observed them to get their way across the oceans.

HOW MANY CONSTELLATIONS ARE THERE?

Eighty-eight.

HOW ARE STARS IN A CONSTELLATION LINKED?

There is no real link between stars in a constellation—the patterns are totally imaginary. But without constellations to help us, it would be hard for us to locate stars in the sky since there are as many as 1,000 stars visible on a dark, clear night. If you can recognize the constellation Orion by its pattern, you can immediately identify the stars in Orion's belt, shoulder, and feet. You can even use Orion as a reference to identify other constellations in its neighborhood.

WHAT ARE ALPHA AND BETA?

The stars in each constellation are named after letters in the Greek alphabet. Usually, the brightest star in each constellation is called Alpha, the next brightest Beta, and so on. In Alpha Centauri is the brightest star in the constellation Centaurus.

WHERE IS THE NORTH STAR?

The North Star is a bright star that lies directly over the North Pole. It is also called Polaris or Alpha (first) Star in the Ursa Minor constellation. When photographed with a long exposure, all the stars seem to rotate around the North Star as the Earth turns.

WHAT IS THE BIG DIPPER?

Also known as the Plough, the Big Dipper is the most visible part of the Great Bear or Ursa Major constellation, which is one of the best known constellations in the northern sky. Drawing an imaginary line between Deneb and Merak, two stars of the Plough, we can locate the North Star.
