Race on Campus Julie J. Park, 2020-08-05 2020 Critics Choice Book Award American Educational Studies Association AESA In Race on Campus Julie J. Park argues that there are surprisingly pervasive and stubborn myths about diversity on college and university campuses and that these myths obscure the notable significance and admirable effects that diversity has had on campus life Based on her analysis of extensive research and data about contemporary students and campuses Park counters these myths and explores their problematic origins Among the major myths that she addresses are charges of pervasive self segregation arguments that affirmative action in college admissions has run its course and become counterproductive related arguments that Asian Americans are poorly served by affirmative action policies and suggestions that programs and policies meant to promote diversity have failed to address class based disadvantages In the course of responding to these myths Park presents a far more positive and nuanced portrait of diversity and its place on American college campuses At a time when diversity has become a central theme and goal of colleges and universities throughout the United States Race on Campus offers a contemporary research based exploration of racial dynamics on today's college campuses

Asian Americans' Achievement Advantage Priyank G. Shah, 2011 Abstract This dissertation examines when and why the Asian advantage in academic performance emerges Analyzing nearly 4 500 children from the Early Childhood Longitudinal Study Birth Cohort ECLS B I find that the Asian advantage emerges in force by the age of four indicating that non school factors operating during the early childhood years are key to shaping racial gaps in achievement Additionally I examine the factors key to generating and maintaining the Asian achievement advantage by examining family characteristics and parenting practices at the pan ethnic and ethnic group level Asian American parents have especially high educational expectations for their children yet behavioral measures of parenting suggest uneven investments e.g. Asian American parents read to their child less frequently than white parents In addition although all Asian subgroups in my sample exhibit an advantage for cognitive skills the path toward high performance varies in important ways with some groups benefiting primarily from socioeconomic advantages Chinese and others doing well primarily as a result of parenting expectations Vietnamese The findings of this dissertation have implications for research that seeks to better understand early education related racial ethnic gaps that can play an important role in racial stratification
