(Del Hymes, 1970's), (Michael Canale and Merrill Swain, 1980)

Grammatical Competence	Discourse Competence	Sociolinguistic Competence	Strategic competence
includes lexical items, morphology, syntax and phonology	allows a language user to connect utterances and sentences into a meaningful whole	requires an understanding of the social context in order to choose and use language appropriate to the situation	allows people to enhance communication or compensate for imperfect communication techniques

Communicative competence

So what does this mean in the languages classroom?

Richards (2001) classifies Communicative Language Teaching as an approach rather than a method. He posits the following set of principles that reflect a communicative view of language and language learning and that can be used to support a wide variety of classroom procedures.

- Learners learn a language through using it to communicate.
- Authentic and meaningful communication should be the goal of classroom activities.
- Fluency is an important dimension of communication.
- Communication involves the integration of different language skills.
- Learning is a process of creative construction and involves trial and error.

Larsen-Freeman (1986) focuses on the need for communicative language classrooms to be student-centred, where the teacher is a facilitator of students' learning, a manager of classroom activities, with responsibility for establishing situations likely to promote communication.
