Community Development Quota Program In Alaska:

The Community Development Quota Program in Alaska National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Polar Research Board, Ocean Studies Board, Commission on Geosciences, Environment and Resources, Committee to Review the Community Development Quota Program, 1999-05-03 This book reviews the performance and effectiveness of the Community Development Quotas CDQ programs that were formed as a result of the Sustainable Fisheries Act of 1996 The CDQ program is a method of allocating access to fisheries to eligible communities with the intent of promoting local social and economic conditions through participation in fishing related activities The book looks at those Alaskan fisheries that have experience with CDQs such as halibut pollock sablefish and crab and comments on the extent to which the programs have met their objectives helping communities develop ongoing commercial fishing and processing activities creating employment opportunities and providing capital for investment in fishing processing and support projects such as infrastructure It also considers how CDQ type programs might apply in the Western Pacific The Community Development Quota Program Bering Sea Fishermen's Association, 1999 Community Development Quota Program Lauren A. Krueger, 2006

Sustainability and resilience are worthwhile goals for western Alaskan communities From shifting global markets to climate change these communities face numerous novel threats to their survival that increased resilience can mitigate This thesis examines how an innovative community management scheme the Community Development Quota CDQ Program can contribute resilience to its communities how those resilience lending aspects can be better utilized and what obstacles prevent sustainability in western Alaska Qualitative semi structured interviews with ten community residents from four of the six CDQ groups were conducted and CDQ relevant documents and reports were evaluated to measure eight indicators of sustainability and resilience community demographics job creation education rates per capita incomes flexibility monitoring and feedback mechanisms communication and evidence of learning While building sustainability and resilience has not been the primary focus of the program to date progress has been made Much intergroup variation exists within the indicators and much work remains for sustainability and resilience The capacity for much greater success exists within the program An adaptive co management approach focused on creating sustainable and resilient communities is a viable path to this success The experience of the CDQ program can inform other Arctic communities working toward sustainability and resilience
