Ways of Contending David Micah Greenberg, 2004 This thesis explores community organizing by Community Development Corporations CDCs the different outcomes achieved by organizing campaigns and the factors that contribute to their successes and failures Among organizing outcomes I focus not only on policy victories and physical or economic improvements to communities but also on the ways that collective action produces changes in local political institutions Using rich qualitative and extensive quantitative data from organizing campaigns by ten

CDCs I show how claims about the role of racial and ethnic difference in community and about the need for conflict in creating community change find acceptance or resistance from political institutions While institutional resistance to a campaign s claims about community makes it more difficult for campaigns to succeed this resistance also indicates the possibility that successful organizing will enact changes to local institutions I find that CDCs won campaigns and with success enacted some type of impact on political institutions by coordinating mobilization throughout their activities and departments and by including activists in governance and decision making Youth-Led Community Organizing Melvin Delgado, Lee Staples, 2008 Youth led organizing is increasingly receiving attention from scholars activists and the media Delgado and Staples have produced the first comprehensive study of this dynamic field Their well organized book takes an important step toward bridging the gap between academic knowledge and community practice in this growing area

Human Behavior in the Social Environment Anissa Taun Rogers, 2016-08-05 In this book and companion custom website you will find a comprehensive overview of the issues related to human behavior and the social environment that are important to understand for practice updated with current and relevant information on important topics in social work. Additional relevant content, contemporary theories, and intervention modalities are incorporated throughout the text to keep students up to date with what is happening in the field. Careful organization of chapters to first present foundational theoretical perspectives on the human condition and then provide information on basic facets of human development encourages students to use conceptual lenses to inform their practice with individuals at different stages of life. Four final chapters cover theoretical foundations and issues surrounding spirituality, families, and groups, organizations, and communities. These chapters offer in-depth information and discussions on mezzo and macro content. The organization of the chapters also helps students better understand how contemporary theories and approaches to issues stem from foundational theories and how they can be used to inform work with clients. Particular emphasis on the ways in which poverty, diversity, and strengths affect human development and behavior. The opportunity to see how the concepts fit into social work practice using case examples that open each chapter and are referred to throughout the chapter. supplemental chapters provide instructors with an opportunity to choose the chapters that best fit the layout of the course. But the combined texts also come with a companion set of readings and six unique cases that encourage your students to learn by doing and to apply their knowledge of human behavior to best practices. Go to www.routledgesw.com/hbse to learn more. These additional resources easily allow you to use the text and its related resources in a two-semester sequence.

Contesting Community James DeFilippis, Robert Fisher, Eric Shragge, 2010-05-19. What do community organizations and organizers do and what should they do? For the past thirty years, politicians, academics, advocates, and activists have heralded community as a site and strategy for social change. In contrast, Contesting Community paints a more critical picture of community work which, according to the authors, in both theory and practice has amounted to less than the sum of its parts. Their comparative study of efforts in the United States, the United Kingdom, and Canada describes and analyzes the limits and potential of this work. Covering dozens of groups including ACORN, Brooklyn's Fifth Avenue Committee, and the Immigrant Workers Centre in Montreal, and discussing alternative models, this book is at once historical and contemporary, global and local. Contesting Community addresses one of the vital issues of our day: the role and meaning of community in people's lives and in the larger political economy.

Revitalizing Urban Neighborhoods William Dennis Keating, Norman Krumholz, Philip Star, 1996. Since the 1950s and the advance of urban renewal, local governments and urban policy have focused heavily on the central business district. However, such development has all but ignored the inner-city neighborhoods that continue to struggle in the shadows of high-rise America. This analysis of urban neighborhoods in the United States from 1960 to 1995 presents fifteen essays by scholars of urban planning and development. Together, they show how urban neighborhoods can and must be preserved as economic, cultural, and political centers.
