P. Koppen, Mark Giordano, John Butterworth, 2007 The lack of sufficient access to clean water is a common problem faced by communities efforts to alleviate poverty and gender inequality and improve economic growth in developing countries While reforms have been implemented to manage water resources these have taken little notice of how people use and manage their water and have had limited effect at the ground level On the other hand regulations developed within communities are livelihood oriented and provide incentives for collective action but they can also be hierarchal enforcing power and gender inequalities This book shows how bringing together the strengths of community based laws rooted in user participation and the formalized legal systems of the public sector water management regimes will be more able to reach their goals Process and benefits of community-led multiple use water services van Koppen, Barbara, Magombeyi, Manuel S., Jacobs-Mata, Inga, Molose, V., Phasha, K., Bophela, T., Modiba, I., White, M., 2020-07-12 Resources of Water Prathna Thanjavur Chandrasekaran, Muhammad Salik Javaid, Aftab Sadiq, 2021-02-24 Water is a limited natural resource indispensable for human existence Water resources exist in the form of glaciers oceans

How to Support Community Management of Water Supplies Catarina Fonseca, Eveline Bolt, 2002 This book is for those who are in charge of facilitating community management of water supplies It provides guidelines and food for thought for managers and decision makers who want to improve the performance of their organization and make sure that water supply services in place keep working It answers such questions as what kind of support do communities require How can this support be provided What are the organizational conditions we need to put in place What tools can we use Who should be involved What does it demand from support organizations and the communities In other words what does it take to support community management of water supplies

Water for Rural Communities John Briscoe, David M. De Ferranti, 1988 Efforts to improve the water supplies used by people in rural areas of developing countries have run into serious obstacles not only are public funds not available to build facilities for all but many newly constructed facilities have fallen into disrepair and disuse Along with the numerous failures there are also successes in this sector From these successes a new view has begun to emerge of what the guiding principles of rural water supply strategies should be This book brings together and spells out the constituents of this emerging view The central message is that it is the local people themselves not those trying to help them who have the most important role to play The community itself must be the primary decisionmaker the primary investor the primary organizer and the primary overseer The authors examine the implications of this primary principle for the main policy issues the level of service to be provided in different settings the level and mechanisms for cost recovery the roles for the private and public sectors and the role of women The potential advantages of proceeding from this outlook instead of the older top down approaches are considerable Improvement efforts are more likely to meet felt needs new facilities are more likely to be kept in service and more communities are more likely to get safe water sooner

Water Resources Sustainability Larry W. Mays, 2007 Providing clean water to earth's rapidly growing human population is one the major issues of the 21st Century The climatic effects of global warming on water supply has made this a hot button issue
