Carson Kress grew up in Hollywood during the Depression. Hollywood beckoned into the wake of her husband, movie houses were refuge, the public lands greater. She spent part of World War II working in an aircraft plant, and afterwards worked around the country, working at anything and everything (from printing mail, specialty wallpaper, house as decorator, New Orleans nightclub, and even as waitress & Taylor in New York, among others). All this time she had been writing and dreaming manuscripts, until at last one of the novels was produced. Now she's back home in California, writing full time.
