James wrote an article for The Times Literary Supplement surveying the younger generation of British novelists Walpole was greatly encouraged that one of the greatest living authors had publicly ranked him among the finest young British novelists As war approached Walpole realised that his poor eyesight would disqualify him from service and accepted an appointment based in Moscow reporting for The Saturday Review and The Daily Mail Although allowed to visit the front in Poland these dispatches were not enough to stop hostile comments at home that he was not doing his bit for the war effort Walpole was ready with a counter appointment as a Russian officer in the Sanitar He explained they were part of the Red Cross that does the rough work at the front carrying men out of the trenches helping at the base hospitals in every sort of way doing every kind of rough job During a skirmish in June 1915 Walpole rescued a wounded soldier his Russian comrades refused to help and this meant Walpole had to carry one end of a stretcher dragging the man to safety He was awarded the Cross of Saint George By late 1917 it was clear to Walpole and the authorities that his work was at an end In London Walpole joined the Foreign Office and remained there until resigning in February 1919 For his wartime work he was awarded the CBE in 1918 Walpole continued to write and publish and now also began a career on the highly lucrative lecture tour in the United States At the end of 1924 Walpole met Harold Cheevers who soon became his friend and constant companion and remained so for the rest of his life that perfect friend Hollywood in the shape of MGM invited him in 1934 to write the script for a film of David Copperfield He also had a small acting role in the film In 1937 Walpole was offered a knighthood He accepted although Kipling Hardy Galsworthy had all refused I m not of their class Besides I shall like being a knight he said Unfortunately his health was undermined by diabetes made worse by the frenetic pace of his life Sir Hugh Seymour Walpole CBE died of a heart attack at Brackenburn aged 57 on June 1st 1941 He was buried in St John s churchyard in Keswick
